Law To Limit Land Seizure By Eminent Domain Upheld

BY EVERETT NEWSWANGER, Managing Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) The Commonwealth court last week upheld the state's Agricultural Lands Condemnation Approval Board's (ALCAB) decision to bar the Northwestern Lehigh School District from condemning farmland in an Agriclutural Land Preserve. In addition, the court also said the ALCAB has been specifically given the right by the state legislature to limit the power of eminent domain pursuant to the state's policy of preserving "Agricultural Areas." The opinion written by Senior Judge Jacob Kalish said, "In the instant case the record shows that with respect to the policy to preserve agricutural areas, the state intended to limit the power of condemnation."

"We are obviously pleased with the decision," said Boyd Wolff, state ag secretary. "This is the first test of the Farmland Preservation Act. The ruling was very decisive and will help us keep valuable land in agriculture. Now we will be able to operate in a reasonable and prudent manner," Wolff said. He is chairman of ALCAB.

The school district wants to condemn 24 acres of irrigatable potato ground with a farm pond that borders its main campus in New Tripoli. The land is owned by Raymond and Elma Snyder and has been officially placed in an agricultural security area by authorization of Act 43.

Under Act 43, better known as the farmland security act, prime farmland cannot be taken by eminant domain if it will have an adverse affect on agriculture in the area or if there is no reasonable alternative. When ALCAB heard the case,they ruled that the school district failed to meet the requirements to take the land on both counts.

In the test case, the school district argued that the law creating the ALCAB was unconstitutional because it stripped the authority to condemn land to build schools and meet the Constitution's requirement that it provide an adequate education for the district's children. But the court in a 3-0 ruling dismissed the school district's appeal and upheld the constitutionality of the farmland security act.

Stephen Pelcher, counsel for ALCAB, said it appeared that the Commonwealth Court panel had agreed with all the arguments made against the school district's appeal. And unless the court's decision is overturned by the state Supreme Court, a precedent for future ALCAB decisions has been established.

According to a published report, John Freund, lawyer for the school board, said the board will decide whether to seek an appeal before the Supreme Court or to continue with its sec-

Holstein Day Offers Fun and Fellowship

BY PAT PURCELL

MANHEIM (Lancaster) — Learn about the new sire proofs, get a great meal, bring the family and spend the evening enjoying the fellowship of Lancaster's Holstein breeders at the annual field day, to be held June 22, 7 p.m., at the farm of Harold and Lowell Brubaker and families in Manheim.

Guest speaker, Dr. Ole Maland of Tri-State Breeders will have many of the answers to the questions on the minds of dairy farmers concerning the new sire proofs which will be coming out in July. Maland was part of the five-member committee which designed the new sire proofs. These new sire proofs will include the udder composites of the bull and are destined to impact on sire selection decisions.

In addition to being the guest speaker, Maland will serve as the official judge for the evening. The Brubakers will present several age groups of cows for judging. Anyone wishing to take part in the judging may. This year's winners will win a unique gift from Mercer County, the sight of the 1989 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention.

FUTURES MARKET TRENDS GRAIN AND LIVESTOCK

Acres Corn Update: Corn futures continued their slide today, losing from 1-3/4 to 4 cents. Weakness in the July option was attributed to the unwinding of July/December spreads and resulted in a four cent loss. Further pressure was tied to weaker basis levels and news that a USDA official denied a rumor that a new corn catalog would be delayed. Yesterday's news that the USSR had purchased 300,000 metric tonnes of U.S. corn and 100,000 metric tonnes of sorghum had already been factored into the market. Forecasts for increased rainfall prompted selling of the back months. December closed today 1-3/4 cents lower at $2.36-3/4 after trading in a range from $2.35-1/2 to $2.38.

Acres Soybean Update: Soybean futures settled lower this afternoon but off session lows posting losses from 2-3/4 cents to 3 cents. Pressure was linked today to cash market weakness in addition to spillover from the neighboring wheat pit. The supply situation is still tight with farmer sales remaining light and this should continue to support the nearbys. Activity today was fairly lackluster with commission houses and commercials playing both sides of the market. November settled 2-3/4 cents lower today at $6.31 after trading in a range from $6.27-1/2 to $6.34.

Acres Wheat Update: Wheat futures continued to weaken today posting losses from 5-1/4 to 6-1/4 cents. Selling again today was linked to ongoing concerns over the political situation in China. Ideas of disruption in sales to China prompted session long weakness with July dropping to a low of $3.81-1/2 shortly before the close. December closed out the day six cents lower at $4.03-3/4 after trading in a range from $4.03-1/2 to $4.08. Judging from what has happened during the last week, it is now time to take a wait and see attitude before pushing the panic button.

Acres Cattle Update: Live and feeder cattle futures settled today from unchanged to 30 points higher with settle-

June 6, 1989

The market tone continued fully steady to firm on wholes and whites, unsettled on yolks. Trading activity was irregular. Breakers generally worked full schedules but were cautious and selective as raw materials were held in firm hands. Floor stocks were sufficient to handle most current requirements.

Northeast Chicken Parts

Trucklot buying interest was mixed and selective. Demand centered mainly on short supplies of rib-on and line run breasts for both retail and further processors. Despite the strength in whole breasts and a fair to good demand for cutlets the bulk of trading was at 2.65 and supplies were generally adequate. Demand for legs and leg quarters was fair with legs in the closer balance of an adequate to fully adequate supply. Wings were in irregular distribution with the majority of sales at unchanged prices. Giblets were fully adequate.

National Egg Market

June 7, 1989

The market tone was generally steady. Cartoned egg movement mixed but mostly of a moderate nature. Supplies were usually adequate with jumbos in the tightest position. PENNFIELD TESTING LAB - LANCASTER

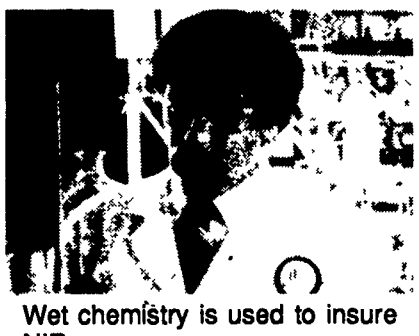
NIR provides fast and accurate forage results.



Wet chemistry is used to insure NIR accuracy.

ADF (acid detergent fiber) and NDF (neutral detergent fiber) are used to determine available energy from forages.

Forages and water samples are checked for the presence of nitrates when requested.

NO CHARGE FORAGE TESTING:

The primary job at Pennfield's Testing lab is the accurate testing of the feed ingredients used to make Pennfield feeds. You can not consistently make a quality feed unless you know the analysis of the ingredients to be used. Pennfield uses the feed testing equipment to process over 5,000 forage samples annually.

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

If your tobacco beds appear yellow and seem stunted, treat beds immediately as follows:

5 Tblsp. Ferbam 76 WP + 2 tsp. Streptomycin per gallon of water. Apply 2 gallons of this mixture per 300 sq. ft. of tobacco bed. Apply only in the evening for best results. (Refer to our March 1989 issue of Paradise Tobacco News).

Due to tremendous export demand, very low inventories, and weather problems affecting all tobacco growing areas - we expect excellent demand and an exciting market for 1989 grown tobacco!!

We would recommend any available areas on the farm be grown in tobacco. We are working with companies already and we have developed a good relationship with them.

YOU GROW TOBACCO! WE WILL MARKET IT!

OPINION

KEEP FARMLAND UNDER THE PLOW

The Commonwealth court now has ruled that the Agricultural Land Condemnation Approval Board has the authority to make judgment on eminent domain proceedings that would swipe ag land out of an ag security area. Since this was the first test case of Act 43, the Farmland Preservation Act, the ruling was especially important. The court could have taken a broad view of the Northwestern Lehigh School District's attempt to take 24 acres out of an ag security area to build a new school. If that had happened, the court's view would have said that school boards are covered by Pennsylvania School Code and not by ALCAB. And the State's Ag land Preservation program would have been worthless.

But as the ruling came down, ALCAB has been specifically given the right by the state legislature to limit the power of emenent domain pursuant to the state's policy of preserving ag security areas. That's good news for those who want to keep their farms in agriculture but had the fear that even if they put them in an ag security area, any local or state government body could have come along and condemned the land at will.

Now, unless the State Supreme Court overturns the ruling, the precedent has been set to make the state's farmland preservation policy effective. And it gives some hope to those who think that the powers of eminent domain are now often abused by local governing bodies for uses the law never intended.

As for Raymond Snyder, who is 85-years old and his wife Elma Snyder, who is 90-years old, the potato rows remain 1,100 feet long instead of 200 feet long. and the state farmland preservation act with provision for ag security areas remains a viable way to keep farmland under the plow instead of under development.

To Keep Pesticide Records

Today's battle with insects, fungus, rodents and weeds requires the use of many different chemicals. It is important to keep an accurate record of any chemical used. This would include the date, name of material, application rate, field number and even the direction the wind is blowing. This might save a lot of trouble and loss of income in case there is some question.

Many food items are being checked by Food and Drug representatives for pesticide residues. It is possible to find residues even where the producer followed regulations and every recommended practice. Your records would be very important in these cases. In any event, always follow label instructions.

To Handle Gasoline and Diesel Fuel With Respect

We use a lot of gasoline and diesel fuels on our farms and when they are not handled properly, they can be a source of a serious fire.

Gasoline should be stored in an underground tank. When it is necessary to store it above ground, then the tank should be located at least 40 feet away from any building. Small amounts can be stored in approved safety cans. Be sure to label all cans plainly so there is no danger of mix-up.

Diesel fuel and gasoline must be kept away from flame or heat. Strictly enforce NO SMOKING rules. Always refuel outdoors where vapors cannot accumulate. If you spill some fuel, wipe it up before starting an engine.

Storing any fuels in glass jugs or bottles is inviting trouble. It is also dangerous to use them to start burning trash, leaves, barbecue pits or stoves. Gasoline should not be used as a cleaning or degreasing agent. During this busy season, take time to be safe.

To Encourage Water Consumption

In the managing of any type of livestock or poultry it is very important to obtain maximum water consumption. Some animals such as a heavy producing milk cow will drink 30 gallons of water per day. All animals should have a free access to water at all times. In the summer the water should be as cool as possible, and in the winter warmed water will increase consumption. Open troughs might be covered unless the water is flowing through them.

One way to encourage good water intake is to provide access to loose salt and minerals. These items will not only help water consumption but will balance the ration and help promote more complete digestibility. During warm, humid weather, we humans drink more liquids. Livestock and poultry will do the same when given the chance. This is good management and will increase efficiency in production.

To Care For Your Lawn

Nearly everyone likes to have a good, attractive green lawn around their home. Also, a nice lawn feels good underfoot, and makes your home cooler during the summer.

Many homeowners could have a better lawn if they did not mow so closely. Cutting too short weakens the grass, gives it a poor color, and allows weeds, especially crabgrass to take over.

Since most homeowners can't get around to mowing more than once a week, they should mow higher than most people presently do.

A good height for Kentucky Bluegrass and fine leaf fescue is 1½ to 2 inches. Bunch-type grasses, such as tall fescue, should be cut 2 to 3 inches in height. To learn how high your mower is set, place the mower on the driveway or barn floor and measure the distance from the cutting edge to the pavement or floor.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

Editor,

As the American Veal Association (A.V.A.) arrives in Lancaster, PA for its 1989 national convention, the welfare of calves in "fancy" veal operations is sure to be questioned, and with good reason. Not only does basic common sense tell us that veal calves would be healthier and happier without being confined in veal crates, but scientific research has substantiated this claim.

In U.S.D.A. funded research, Dr. Ted Friend and associates at Texas A & M University found that calves confined in stalls typical of today's veal creates suffered a state of "chronic stress" while calves in more spacious hutches and yards did not. Stress levels were measured physiologically through adrenal and hormonal testing. (This research is detailed in the "Journal of Animal Science" Vo. 60, No. 5, 1985.) When hutch calves were switched with stall calves, there was a reversal in adrenal function, supporting the contention that housing directly influenced stress levels.

Dr. Friend's research also concluded that close confinement adversely effected overall productivity and that calves confined in crates required five times as much medication as calves kept in open

WHEN GOD SAYS "SHOUT!"
June 11, 1989

Background Scripture:
Joshua 6
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 2:1-11

Is this any way to capture a city? "You shall march around the city, all the men of war going around the city once. Thus shall you do for six days...and on the seventh day you shall march around the city seven times...as soon as you hear the sound of the trumpet, then all the people shall shout with a great shout; and the wall of the city will fall down flat" (Joshua 6:3-5)!

I know of no reference to anyone having ever tried this tactic either before or after Joshua. On the surface, we can see that it might well be "great theatre," but lousy military science.

IT WON'T WORK

The writer doesn't give us any indication of how the people of Israel reacted. Surely there must have been some in their midst who said, "This is a crazy idea; it won't work!' That is what I would say if I were in a comparable situation today. Wouldn't you?

Obviously, however, there are times when God calls us to follow paths that are totally different from the paths upon which human reason would direct us. There are times when we must remember that "...as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts" (Isaiah 55:8).

GOD'S HIGHER THOUGHTS

As Christians, we value very highly the power of reason which we regard as God's gift to us. When Jesus says, "Love one another as I have loved you," I not only receive that teaching on the strength of his authority, but also my powers of reason tell me it is true.

At the same time, however, not everything either in life in general or in particular can be comprehended with the powers of reason. There are times when life takes us beyond the limits of reason into a region where only faith can guide us. There are times when I simply cannot understand how God's way can possibly work, but I must strive to follow it anyway.

So it was with the people of Israel under Joshua before the city of Jericho. His instructions seemed totally useless, but the time had come for the people of Israel to trust God and follow him in faith. Sometimes, when reason tells us that nothing will make the walls come tumbling down, God commands us to "Shout!" — or something else that seems equally inappropriate—and that is exactly what we need to do.

Now There's A Farmer In Your Area Who Can Make Any Business Loan The Bank Can.

Since 1917, farmers have taken kindly to Farm Credit because we're owned and controlled by people who really understand your business.

Farmers. Just like yourself. Thing was, we didn't exactly lay out a Sunday dinner spread of loans. Our menu was limited, and we knew it.

So recently we overhauled our lending system. We now offer competitive rates and options for loans we never could offer before.
Adjustable rate mortgages.
Revolving lines of credit.
Variable and fixed rate loans.
Terms of 30 days to 30 years. There's even a variety of services including insurance plans.

Some things do remain the same, however. The Farm Credit loan officer you talk to still makes most of the decisions.

And chances are he can do it faster than most bankers can say "bureaucracy."

So think about this for a moment. Who would you rather deal with for your next loan? A banker who merely wants your business. Or a farmer who knows it.

1989 BARN PAINTING Latest Developments

1. PREPARATION - High volume water blasting at 1,000 lb. pressure re-surfaces barn siding into a smooth (like new) appearance!
   a. Performed by professionals quickly at reasonable cost.
   b. By yourself with your own or rented equipment.
   c. Or other more conventional methods.
2. APPLICATION - To insure better adherence to this super prepared surface, use the best fine bristle brush in four directions to evenly distribute the recommended mil thickness of seal coat coverage.
3. SPECIALIZATION - Every barn is different but generally it's best to use a high quality mildew resistant product, specially formulated to meet the requirements of this partially weathered wood that was and will be weather stressed.
4. WARNING - The modified oil latex is less effective as a wood preserver and actually increases nail & metal deterioration. Deal with home people. At their rates, I could double mine.

FARM BUREAU ACRES

ments well-off session highs. Weakness in the cash market pressured the June and August options with reports of light fed cattle sales and lower cut-out values tempering buying activity. Selling was limited by the sentiment that cash fundamental weakness had already been factored into the market. Buying in feeders continued on news of higher replacement prices at the auction barns along with a slightly higher cash index price. Some short-covering in the deferred months was noted.

CME FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE - 6/03/89-$76.33 up $ .06 ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: CASH - steady FUTURES - steady

Acres Hog Update: Hog futures closed from 13 lower on the February to 45 points higher on the July after a fairly featureless session. Support was attributed to ideas that producers were beginning to hold back on their marketings after weakness early week along with spillover from activity in the pork bellies. Bellies were again the hot spot today with limit gains on the July option midday and then selling tied to lower wholesale values. Bellies closed from 45 points lower to 132 points higher. The cash markets today were steady to $1.00 lower with Omaha quoted at $45.00 to $47.00 and Peoria at $45.50 to $47.00. Slaughter today was 315,000 which compares with 290,000 last year for the same period. Hams were $2.00 to $5.00 lower with loins unquoted.

The results are excellent. We already hold the weight and feed conversion records for three major broiler companies. From start to finish, the New Orange One is re-writing the book on feed conversion.

The New Orange One is fully adjustable from "full flow" for starting baby chicks, to a "limited flow" as you finish your birds. It is unique in doing both well. At the same time we made it stronger, from top to bottom, so you can have the extra benefit of more rugged and reliable equipment.

Ask your Big Dutchman poultry equipment distributor about the New Orange One and how it can help you do your best.

Lyng Award Recipients Honored

ARLINGTON, VA — Two recipients of the Richard E. Lyng Award were named at the fifth annual meeting of the National Dairy Board May 16-18.

Eugene C. Meyer and Joseph J. Westwater were honored during a dinner Wednesday, May 17 for their outstanding years of service to the dairy industry.

Meyer, former managing editor for Hoard's Dairyman, had been a member of the editorial staff for 41 years. "Known for his editorial column, Meyer was a long-time crusader for greater advertising and promotion of dairy products. His editorials had a major impact on the switch from voluntary to mandatory contributions from dairy farmers," Chairman of the Board, Ivan Strickler said.

Westwater has also had a commitment to the dairy industry and the promotion of dairy products for more than 30 years. Named as the first Chief Executor Officer of the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, Westwater was the "right man for the job," Strickler said. "Joe's long-term experience with the dairy industry coupled with his knowledge of the political process and the workings of the U.S. Department of Agriculture enabled the Board to hit the ground running."

The Richard E. Lyng award was created by the National Dairy Board to recognize the many contributions to and support of the dairy industry by former Secretary of Agriculture, Richard E. Lyng. Recipients of this award fall under three main criteria:

1. Directly served the dairy industry or has, through public service or other activity, been supportive of the dairy industry.

2. Has directly, through his or her career activity, participated in the promotion of milk and dairy products, or

3. Has contributed to improving the image of dairy products with the general public.

No spreader on the market can match the versatility of Scavenger.™

A new look in spreader design.

More than 7 years ago, Hedlund/Martin introduced the Scavenger—a manure spreader based on an entirely new technology.

Gone were unreliable apron chains and "rooster comb" beaters. Gone were leaky endgates. Gone were the old-fashioned boxy shape. In their place—a unique patented square auger and side-discharge expeller reel. And with its welded Unibody construction, Scavenger looked like nothing before.

But even though it looked unusual, Scavenger worked. Scavenger proved itself where it counts—in the fields of farmers all across America.

And like all successful advances in technology, Scavenger invited a slew of competitors. Today, a wide variety of farm equipment manufacturers sell a Scavenger-like machine.

Unmatched performance.

While some of these look-alike units are perfectly adequate for certain manure-spreading application, none can match Scavenger's overall versatility. Scavenger spreads all kinds of manure—liquid, semi-solid, pen pack (even frozen)—all year 'round. In even spread patterns up to 50 feet. All in one machine.

So when you find it's time to purchase a new spreader, take a hard look at your choices. Don't be misled by spreaders that claim to do it all. Compare actual capabilities. We think you'll find your choice obvious. You'll choose the spreader with unmatched performance—Scavenger.

See for yourself.

For a firsthand look at Scavenger, see your local Hedlund/Martin dealer. Or write: Hedlund/Martin, Inc., A Gehl Company, 741 Kutztown Road, Myerstown, PA 17067. Telephone: 717-933-4151.

Scavenger's design and technology is covered by one or more of the following patents: U.S. 4,368,272; 4,467,967; 4,473,184; 4,479,608; Canadian 2,262,876; 1,161,468; 1,167,078.

Lilly Reaches Agreement To Develop BST In India

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Eli Lilly and Company and The National Dairy Development Board of India (NDDB) recently signed a "memorandum of understanding" for the development and registration of a range of biotechnology products for use in dairy cattle and buffalo in India. Included in this agreement is Lilly's bovine somatotropin (BST), recently registered in the Soviet Union under the trade name Optiflex™ (somidobove, Elanco), and other new agricultural products of biotechnology.

The NDDB has had a long history of developing India's dairy industry. Beginning with a small village farmers' cooperative in the Anand district of Gujerat in 1946, the dairy industry has now grown to its present size of 53,000 cooperatives serving 6 million farmers. These cooperatives have plans to increase their size to represent 8 million farmers by the mid-1990s. Most farms have two to five cows or buffalo, and the industry processes more than 2.5 million gallons of milk per day, making India the world's fourth largest milk producer. Butter, cheese, ghee (butter oil), and chocolate are also produced. The NDDB oversees a distribution system that covers the entire country and that is striving to improve the economic position of the small farmers so that consumers, in turn, may benefit.

At the signing of the memorandum of understanding, Dr. M P G Kurup, general manager of the biotechnology area of NDDB said, "This is an important milestone in the future of the NDDB. We are delighted to be associated with Lilly in this venture and have great expectations that the new Lilly products of biotechnology will prove to be excellent management tools. The primary product includes Optiflex, a product that requires no capital investment and that increases the efficiency of milk production and the volume of milk produced. The ultimate purpose of the agreement is to further improve the efficiency of the dairy industry in India; the NDDB has played a leading role in this effort for the last 44 years."

E. R. (Ted) Roberts, president of Elanco Products Company, the agricultural division of Eli Lilly and Company, responded by saying, "Eli Lilly and Company in its 113 years of existence has always sought the development of new technologies in the life sciences. We believe that biotechnology can dramatically benefit society and are proud to have marketed the first important product from this new science in 1982, Humulin®, human insulin. Our latest poduct, Optiflex, was developed after extensive research demonstrated that it would increase milk production by 10 to 20 percent and, therefore, be valuable to a country such as India, which has a growing population."

He continued, "Lilly is particularly pleased to be working with the NDDB, which has a history of making new technology available to small farmers in India. It is a further demonstration of both organizations' commitment to leadership in their respective fields."

Sorghum-Sudangrass A Good Alternative Hay, Forage Crop

DEKALB, IL — Pasture, hay, haylage, greenchop or covercrop are excellent uses for sorghum-sudangrass. These hybrids also offer drought tolerance, weed control and tolerance to atrazine carryover from last year, according to Larry Martin, Regional Agronomist for Dekalg-Pfizer Genetics.

Sorghum-sudan can be grazed after reaching a height of 18 inches, about three to four weeks after planting, says Martin. "To get maximum utilization, fence off small acreages and rotate the cattle from area to area as the crop is grazed down. With good growing conditions, five to six mature cows can be grazed per acre."

Excellent hay can be produced with Sudax because of its feed value, palatabile regrowth, and adaptability. "Its drought tolerance keeps it growing when perennial grasses fail," says Martin. "Harvest for hay should occur when the crop is waist high."

Haylage from sorghum-sudan is an excellent feed source if the crop is cut prior to the boot stage. Fine chopping at 40 to 50 percent moisture produces the best packing consistency for upright and bunker silos. "One acre of waist high Sudax greenchop is sufficient for six to eight dairy cows," according to the agronomist.

Because of the fast, lush growth, sorghum-sudan offers excellent weed control on set aside acres. The massive root system and crop residue promote soil tilth.

"Sorghum-sudan is an excellent interim crop for farmers who are reseeding an alfalfa stand," says the Dekalb-Pfizer agronomist. "The sorghum-sudan provides the necessary protection from alfalfa autotoxicity while controlling erosion and providing a feed that surpasses the minimum daily requirements of a cow-calf unit."

Seeding rates vary for the intended purpose. Pasture or greenchop under favorable dryland conditions requires 15 to 20 pounds of seed per acre. Hay or haylage requires 25 to 35 pounds (reduces stem size). Seeding rates as low as six pounds can be used for covercrops," adds Martin.

Regardless of use, clipped sorghum-sudan in the pre-boot stage to prevent seed set. Some hybrids are male sterile, however, the sterility can be broken by pollen from related plants such as grain sorghum, other sorghum-sudangrass hybrids, shattercane, johnsongrass, and broom corn. Pollen from these plants can travel three to four miles.

Sorghum-sudan has excellent tolerance to triazine herbicides and has demonstrated better tolerance to the imidazolinone herbicides than corn. Therefore, sorghum-sudan may be an optional crop for growers who are concerned with carryover in certain fields and do not have the option to grow corn in those acres.

Penn State Publishes New Dairy Manual

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Penn State's College of Agriculture has just published a new resource book designed to help dairy producers keep their herds healthy and economically productive.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Health and Biosecurity Manual has been compiled by Dr. Larry J. Hutchinson, professor of veterinary science, Dr. Tina L. Smith, research assistant, and Carolyn M. Burns, research assistant.

Biosecurity is an umbrella term for all management practices that protect the herd from the entry, spread and adverse effects of diseases. Biosecurity emphasizes that protecting the herd and realizing a good return on dairy products are linked.

The Dairy Health and Biosecurity Manual is designed in notebook format and divided into sections for easy reference. As materials are updated and new subjects added, additional information sheets will be available.

The first section is a checklist, or calendar, of health and biosecurity practices designed to help farmers plan, organize and carry out necessary procedures at the proper time. The checklist includes a calf and heifer calendar from birth to 24 months and shows the proper times to vaccinate and what vaccines should be given. It also provides guidelines for environmental management.

The remainder of the manual is a series of information sheets on health and biosecurity subjects and practices. This information explains the checklist and is divided into seven sections.

The sections and information sheets cover a variety of topics. For introducing new animals into the herd, for example, the manual contains both general information on new arrivals and additional information sheets on bovine leukosis and Johne's disease.

Information also is included on keeping animals healthy once they are a part of the herd. Sections on "Control of Farm Traffic" and "Separation of Groups" discuss rat, mice and bird control as well as the possibility of disease spread through visitors. Charts on housing requirements for calves and heifers and diseases spread from older to younger animals also are included.

"Sanitation and Disinfection," "Preventive Medicine" and "Maintaining High Disease Resistance" provide an easy reference for troubleshooting a great variety of health problems. Charts on common disinfectants, cattle vaccines and water supply analysis are included, along with information on external and internal parasites, mechanical ventilation systems, naturally ventilated housing and footbaths.

"Meat and Milk Quality" includes a drug use guide and information on preventing antibiotic contamination.

Copies of the Pennsylvania Dairy Health and Biosecurity Manual are available for $8 from Penn State University, Publications Distributions Center, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802, or your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

Berries Bring Record Bid

BY LISA RISSER

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Little did Keith Bucher realize when he got up shortly after dawn on Wednesday that the strawberries he was picking would make him $400 richer.

His two-plus quarts of luscious Earli Glo red berries won grand champion honors in the Lancaster County 4-H Strawberry Roundup and attracted the attention of bidders at the Lancaster Rotary Club meeting. Auctioneer Harold K. Keller advised the 12-year-old son of Ken and Evie Bucher to hold the berries high and to look sad until the bidding reached $200.

It wasn't long before a bidding war raged between Andrew G. Gianopoulis, former owner of Andy's Catering, and Donald E. Horne of Pennfield Corp. Gianopoulis emerged victorious and set the all-time high price paid for strawberries at the county's roundup.

Bucher, a student at Manheim Christian Day School and a member of the Mastersonville 4-H Club, has been raising strawberries for three years. This year he harvested from 50 plants.

The reserve champion rosette was awarded to the two quarts exhibited by 12-year-old Jill Ginder who sold her harvest to Horn for $65. Jill, also in her third year of berry tending and a Mastersonville 4-H Club member, is the daughter of Joe and Ann Ginder of Manheim.

Placing third through fifth in the contest were Dwight Keiser of Manheim whose berries were first last year, Phil Siegrist of Bird-In-Hand, and Jill Harnish of Kirkwood.

Arnie Lueck, former Lancaster County Extension agronomist, was a judge for the roundup. "I thought the berry quality overall ranged from good to near excellent," he commented. "They matured to provide an appealing red color, the sugar content was quite satisfactory, and the water content was high, which is another way of saying they were juicy."

The 18 exhibits were rated on tastiness, appearance, and uniformity of size and conformation. Zoann Parker, Lancaster County

(Turn to Page A34)

The berry bonanza began when Zoann Parker, Lancaster County 4-H director, distributed Earli Glo seedlings to 4-H members.

Keith Bucher, right, picked the grand champion bunch of berries at the Lancaster County 4-H Strawberry Roundup. Purchasing the winners for a record-high price of $400 was Andrew Gianopoulos, former owner of Andy's Catering of Lancaster.

Donld E. Horne of Pennfield Corp. purchased the reserve champion quarts of berries from Jill Ginder, a 12-year-old member of the Mastersonville 4-H Club. Presenting the fruit to Horne was Ginder's sister Joan.

A SALUTE TO DAIRYMEN. EVERY MONTH IS DAIRY MONTH WITH US.

In June a lot of people pay tribute to dairy farmers because it's National Dairy Month.

At Hamilton Bank, we feel you deserve credit a lot more often than that. Managing a successful dairy operation requires working capital all year round. So we're here to help you meet your capital requirements whenever you need us.

Dairy is the major agricultural enterprise in Pennsylvania and accounts for 36 percent of agricultural cash receipts. The total annual volume of dairy production for our seven-county area is $446 million. This represents 33 percent of the yearly production for Pennsylvania. Now that's a record you can point to with pride, and we're proud to be able to help—any way, any time. At Hamilton Bank, every month is dairy month!

Vet Urges Caution With Pesticides

training. Young Farmers attending the event received 2 core credits toward their certification.

Sammons, standing above the crowd on the bumper of the Rehrersburg Rescue truck, opened the program with a leading question, "How many of you have your pesticides stored in a separate locked building?" Getting no response, Sammons said, "I'm not surprised. Pesticides should be stored in a safe area away from children, pets and livestock. They should be kept in marked containers that include a list of the contents.

When choosing a place to store pesticides plan ahead: Think how runoff could be controlled should an accident occur and it's nice to have a fire extinguisher handy." Sammons also reminded the audience that fertilizers, liquid ammonia and fuels should be stored with care.

"Now how many of you have read the label of the pesticides you are applying and I mean the whole label." Again no one raised their hands. "Pesticide companies change their products often, sometimes early. If you used a pound of something last year it may only take a tenth of a pound this year to accomplish the same job. Don't mix products together unless the label instructs you to do so. Some pesticides aren't meant to be put together."

Sammons' final question involved protective clothing. None of the audience volunteered that they were wearing proper clothing and Sammons stressed its importance. "Pesticides can cause chronic poisoning. The effects of this poisoning include genetic defects, cancer and clinical signs like a twitching eye."

Pat Richie of the Berks Cooperative Extension Service added several precautions for clothing care. "Be sure to launder clothes separate from the rest of the family wash and the washer should be run on an additional rinse cycle with no clothes in it to help clean the machine. Make sure before you take your gloves off to wash them. Always wash your hands before going to the bathroom and when you're finished applying pesticides shower immediately."

Sammons continued in the same vein. "Remember to clean up properly and dispose of leftovers carefully. There was a case of a farmer who put some leftover furadan in a mineral bag. The pesticides were stored in the same area as the minerals and the next morning an employee picked up the bag of furadan by mistake. The farmer ended up with 100 dead cows. That's a pretty expensive way to save three dollars worth of pesticide."

"Also take care to park sprayers in a safe area, away from wells and the neighbor's lawn. Properly dispose of empty containers too. One empty furadan bag blew into a pasture and a farmer called us with three dead cows. Read label directions to find out what to do with empty containers. I know that everyone has been busy in the last week and there are a lot of farms with empty pesticide containers sitting around right now. It pays to be careful. also don't store pesticides for a long time. We received a call from a farmer that his cows were acting goofy. A strange yellow substance was dripping down from the ceiling onto his cows. It turned out that a pesticide that the farmer had put away 15 years ago was leaking. If you're not going to use it, get rid of it."

Sammons then offered some invaluable advice on what to do if the unthinkable should happen and he prefaced his instructions with words designed to make family members sit up and take notice. "Women and children should pay close attention to what we're about to discuss. When pesticide accidents occur it is most likely that the farmer will be involved and you may be required to act quickly."

"Rule #1... don't be a hero. Save yourself and other people first, then the animals, then if there is any safe way to control runoff. Second get help fast. Berks County will soon have a 911 number, use it.

Rule #3, stop the problem. A small dike may control runoff until proper authorities can arrive. Remember to use your head and don't endanger yourself. Fourth, control the area by keeping people away from the danger. Number 5, if you have been exposed call the poison control center. In Berks Co. this is Reading Hospital. If you need medical attention try to have someone drive you to the hospital. The ten to 15 minutes it could take an ambulance to get to your farm may be critical. Try to rinse yourself off before leaving for the hospital and at the very least tell the medical personnel what you have been exposed to so that they can take the proper precautions. Also try to take a clean pesticide label with you.

If animals are exposed call the vet immediately. There now is a statewide antidote program. The centers closest to us are Penn State and New Bolton Center. To get antidotes from either place can take four hours by vehicle so timing is very important.

Finally, make sure to call your insurance company as soon as possible. You are going to be responsible to pay for the cleanup of the accident and you want your company to be informed right away."

Sammons made it clear that timing can be critical in a pesticide accident and that cleanup can be a highly involved operation. "It will take 5 to 15 minutes for the local fire company tp arrive. If they determine that it is beyond their capacity to handle they will call a level 2 unit which will be on the scene in 30 minutes to an hour. If they can't handle it Berks County has just established a level three team at the Berks Ag. Center. It will take an hour for them to arrive. You will be expected to provide parking for 25 vehicles. The crews will need electricity and a decontamination area will have to be set up complete with showers so team members can wash immediately after leaving the contaminated area.

If the spill is large enough the DER and the EPA will be called and it can take them hours to arrive. A safety zone of ½ to one mile may be established.

If the dirt is contaminated it will have to be removed and two inches of clean soil from under the dirty soil will also have to be removed. It can leave quite a hole. You may be asked to get several loads of commercial sawdust to help absorb the pesticide. In some cases where pesticides were in burning structures it was less expensive to let the barn burn than to clean up the runoff," Sammons said.

The expense doesn't end there, according to Sammons. "Local fire companies have disposable suits to protect them from contamination. Each of these costs $75. If it is a major problem there are suits that cost $3500 and the cleanup personnel work in teams of at least two. So there is $7,000 and often these suits can not be reused."

Members of the Bernville Fire Company modeled their regular fire gear which Sammons explained was ineffective in a pesticide accident and the disposable suits designed for hazardous materials work. Then the firemen thrilled the youngsters in the audience by using their hoses to spray simulated foam and water across the farm driveway in a demonstration of containment techniques.

Despite the incredible hazards and costs involved in an accident, Sammons had numerous examples of careless conduct with pesticides. "In Berks Co. there was one young boy who was playing with a dump truck. He pushed it into his dad's pesticide storage area and filled it with furadan. Then he fed it to dad's cows. Pretty coon four of the animals were acting pretty goofy and the boy ran and told his brother called the dad and he called us. Fortunately he did so promptly. The little boy was all right and the cows were treated. But the farmer had not only the vet expenses but he had to dump his milk from those animals for 10 days."

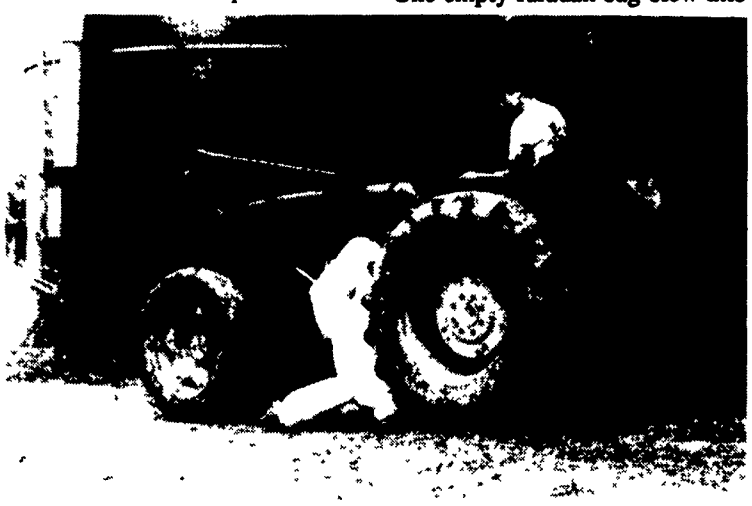
Several of Sammons' examples didn't end so happily. Eighteen cows were killed in a Bladex accident and the vet explained that there is no antidote for Bladex. He also mentioned that golden maladin, a pesticide targeted for flies, is the number one killer for farm dogs. "Now you may think that you wouldn't put much money into a farm dog but if your six-year-old daughter has her arms around the dog's neck and is crying 'please save my puppy,' I'll bet most of you would pack the dog up and bring him to the vets. Maladin is a sugar-based product and kids like it too so be careful with it."

Sammons ended his talk by reminding the farmers that they needed to comply to OSHA's right to know rules and that includes information on all pesticides. "In Northwestern Berks fire departments are trying to have farmers send them a list of the pesticides on the farm, their storage areas, and the location of the farm's wells for future reference."

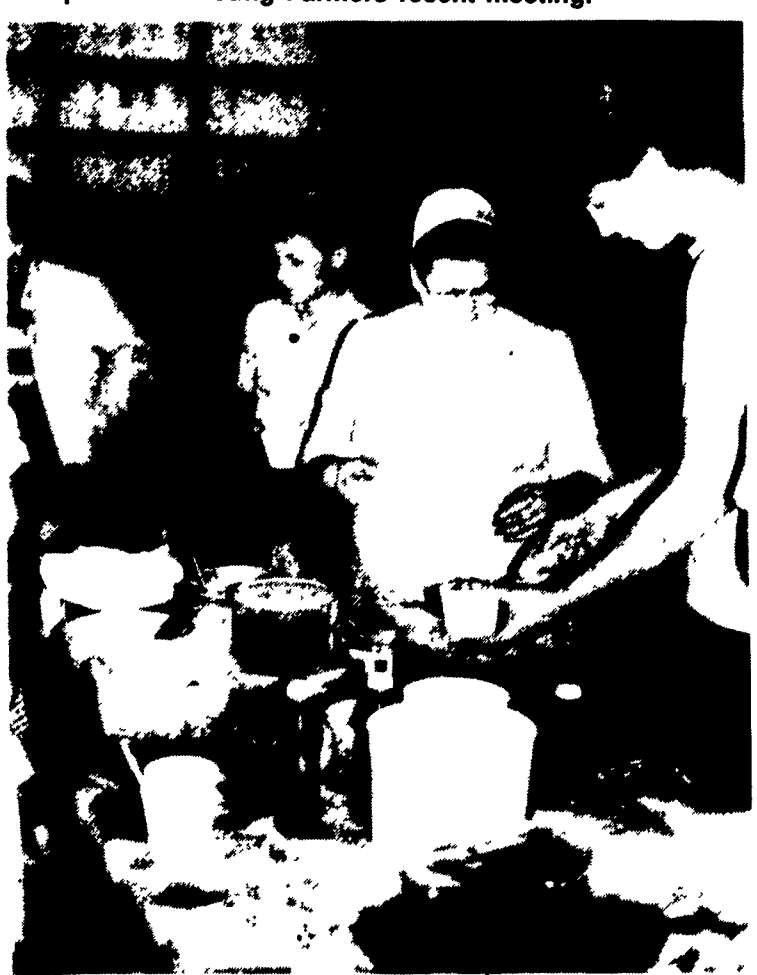
In another safety related issue, four members of the Tulpehocken FFA proved how easy it is to have a tractor accident involving extra riders. Steve Tice, Michael Forry, Robert Krill explained that tractors are not designed to carry extra passengers. Most unnecessary riders are children and according to a Cooperative Extension Ag. Engineering fact sheet, over half of reported farm accidents in Pennsylvania. involving extra riders in 1977, 1978 and 1979 were fatal. Duane Stump then dramatized an accident using a stuffed dummy with a balloon for a head as his extra rider. The dummy fell under the back wheel of the tractor and the pop of the balloon was clearly audible.

Following the program, the Young Farmers held a short meeting then adjourned for homemade ice cream and strawberries.

Lester Feick, Bernville Fire Chief, models a disposable pesticide clean up outfit. The suit which costs $75 is used in low level pesticide spills. According to Sammons protective clothing for large highly toxic pesticide accidents can cost $3500.



Duane Stump of the Tulpehocken FFA demonstrates why it's not good to have extra riders on tractors during the Tulpehocken Young Farmers recent meeting.



Rita Stump, center, dishes homemade ice cream for the 80 people that attended the Tulpehocken Young Farmers Pesticide Safety Meeting and Ice Cream Social.

yard systems. This latter point is of utmost concern considering that in 1988 the U.S.D.A. found that approximately one in every thirty "fancy" veal calves slaughtered contained illegal drug residues. Residue violations in bob veal calves were about half as many.

It is time for the A.V.A. to recognize the problems associated with the crate system and to develop more humane alternatives. The veal crate has been outlawed in England and other European countries. It is only a matter of time before it is outlawed in the United States.

Editor:

I would like to urge farmers with highly erodible land who feel they are doing a good job not to get a conservation plan.

I have a 350 acre dairy farm in Somerset Co., Pa. Most of my tillable acreage is in pasture and hay. All my cropping has been no-till for three years. Yet I was told that I might as well get a conservation plan now because in a few years it will be required by law whether you participate in any USDA programs or not.

Farmers should go to their county ASCS, SCS, and FmHA offices and give a written request to find out the amount spent on salaries and office expense. You have this right under the Freedom of Information Act. If you think too much money is being poorly spent speak out. Also write your Representative and Senators.

I hope others feel as I do; that the best way to protect our rights is just say no to USDA.

When our hospitals lose money and have to close their doors, when our doctors and nurses head toward higher salaries in urban areas, and when our health insurance premiums increase at rates that we can neither pay nor control, rural citizens have to get involved.

It's time we let our lawmakers know that we expect high quality health care in our communities. The studies, committees, and pilot projects that they have offered in the past are no longer suitable solutions. However, several pieces of pending legislation, such as S.B. 306 and H.R. 762, do offer solutions to the problems that face health care providers in rural areas. For example, The Equity for Rural Hospitals Act, which was recently introduced, would eliminate a long-standing Medicare reimbursement policy which pays urban hospitals an average of 35 percent more than rural hospitals for the same procedures. The legislation calls for a four-year phase-in of one national Medicare reimbursement rate for both urban and rural hospitals. It would guarantee payments that are equal to the operating costs of financially-distressed rural hospitals that depend upon Medicare for over 70% of their inpatient services.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, which represents 42,000 members statewide, is joining in a campaign to fight for the quality of rural health care. We, along with other groups, are urging all rural citizens to attach an adhesive bandage to a postcard and send it to their Representatives, Senators, and President Bush, telling them that we don't want any more "bandaid solutions" for the quality of rural health care and asking them to support legislation that would improve rural health care.

In 1988, 43 rural hospitals across the nation closed their doors. If this trend continues, it is estimated that up to 600 rural hospitals will close their doors in the next several years. Rural hospitals need help in order to provide the services that we deserve. Let's let our lawmakers know what we want: real support for rural health care!

Hooray! On May 16, Pennsylvanians took advantage of a rare chance to correct the state legislature and voted down tax reform. Better than their representatives, voters know a bad deal when they see one.

Now we need a referendum on federal tax reform.

A year full of fond memories that will live with me forever. This is the year that I served as the 1988-89 Lancaster County Dairy Princess.

This past year I had the opportunity to grow, mature and learn -- an opportunity that few young people have. Sharing my knowledge and speaking for the Lancaster County dairy farmers and the dairy industry proved to be a challenge along with many rewards. Rewards such as smiling children as they pet the newborn calf, grocery shoppers nodding their head for approval of the delicious dairy samples, and thankful adults who remember the "good ole days" as I visited them in nursing homes and senior centers. The rewards are countless.

To me, life on a dairy farm is very enjoyable, as well as a learning experience. Farm life teaches a very important value-it teaches responsibility-through the daily care of animals, farm equipment, and crops in the field. Being the dairy princess for Pennsylvania's top dairy producing county is also a responsibility that demands the distribution of important nutrition information to people of all ages. Few industries can boast such a variety of nutritious, low-cost, and delicious products necessary for healthy life, as can the dairy industry. It was a great honor and privilege to talk to many people about the wholesome goodness of dairy foods.

This year was made possible with the support of my family and friends. I extend my sincere Thanks to my parents and family for their loving guidance and encouragement. Also, the continuous support of all dairy farmers, local dairies and businesses is greatly appreciated. I Thank You all!

As my reign ends, I remember vividly the people I met, the places I traveled, and the many friends, who I will cherish forever.

When I crown the next dairy princess on June 17, I will do so with a feeling of accomplishment, knowing that many people will "make a cow happy," and drink that glass of milk. As your Lancaster County Dairy Princess, Farewell and God Bless!

RCMA Leaders At Legislative Dairy Reception

BATAVIA, NY — Maintaining a healthy balance between consumer and producer prices was foremost on the minds of two of the northeast's top dairy leaders, William "Bill" Zuber and Edward Anna of the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA), during their participation in State Assembly Minority Leader Clarence D. Rappleyea's annual Dairy Reception held in "The Well" of the Legislative Office Building in Albany on June 1 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

The event, hosted in conjunction with the American Dairy Association, also helped launch the traditional June Is Dairy Month festivities observed nationally.

Zuber, a Churchville NY dairyman and President of RCMA, and Anna, RCMA's Chief Executive Officer, greeted legislators at the Agency's information booth; they explained, personally and via literature, the efforts of over-order pricing through RCMA to counteract the decreasing farmer's share of the consumer cost of dairy products.

RCMA represents over 22,000 dairy farmers throughout 11 northeastern states. The Agency is set up to effect a more equitable balance between what the farmer receives for his product (farm value) and what the consumer must pay at the retail level for that product. This is accomplished by means of an over-order pricing mechanism designed to pay farmers a premium over and above the minimum price set by the federal government for milk.

"We would like legislators to know that RCMA is comprised of dairy farmers who recognize the needs of consumers, retailers and processors as equally important concerns within New York State's overall food economy," said Zuber. "Consumers should not be paying higher prices for dairy foods while dairy farmers get less. Dairy farm families are being forced out of business because of this downward trend in the farm value of dairy products."

Zuber is referring in part to a reported 3 percent drop in the farm value of milk in 1988. According to a USDA Economic Research Service report, the producer got only about 46 percent of the retail price of a half-gallon of milk last year compared with 49% of the retail price in 1987.

"We compared this directly with the steady decline in the numbers of dairy farms in New York State since 1981," said Zuber. "In 1981 there were 15,683 dairy farms. In 1988 only 12,390. This means nearly 3,300 dairy farms and their families were forced to sell out," he said. "We believe this to be an alarming trend for the country's third largest dairy state, contributing almost 1.5 billion dollars to New York's economy.

"Continue this exodus and the state's economy will ultimately be devastated," he exclaimed!

According to Anna, RCMA is structured to keep prices to farmers and consumers at fair levels. "If we keep dairy farmers in business in this state, we can maintain fair prices to consumers over the long term; importing dairy foods from other regions of this country would ultimately cost consumers more money," Anna explained.

plate with a finely-crafted dairy farm scene will be this year's award for the judging contest. The plate is the creation of the Wendell August Forge of Grove City, which was on the ladies' tour during the PHA convention. During the tour, Pat Miller, Lowell's mother-in-law, purchased a coaster set with the same scene.

"We wanted something really different this year and these plates are beautiful," said Lowell. "We feel they are much nice than a trophy. When we saw that we knew it was what we wanted."

No production machinery is found in the ivy-covered Wendell August Forge plant, the only tools of the craft being hammers, anvils and heat forges.

Charles Ackely, ag education instructor at the Ephrata High School will donate his time to tabulate the judging entries to determine the Wendell August Forge plate winners that evening.

Jan Skiles of Narvon will cater a full-course meal which includes barbecue chicken, salads, cheese and crackers, cherry and pecan pies and ice cream all served family style. Jan who is the wife of Jere Skiles, Lancaster County Holstein Club Member, began her catering three years ago and has a reputation for preparing delicious and unforgettable meals. Meal tickets for adults are $7.50, for children ages 5 to 12 years, the cost is just $4.00. Children under four can eat for free.

Ticket prices have been kept low due to contributions from many agri-businesses throughout Lancaster County:

J. Melvin Wenger, Agri-Service of Elizabethtown

Groffdale Concrete Walls of Leola

John Kreider, Show-Ease Stall of Lancaster

Hamilton Bank of Mt. Joy

Lapp Barn Equipment of Gap

Messick Farm Service of Elizabethtown

Penn Jersey Harvestore of New Holland

Gehman Feeds of Denver.

ABS donated the signs above the cows for judging.

Entertainment will be provided by the Heffner Music Ministry of Elizabethtown which has toured internationally doing more than 50 concerts per year.

Parents should bring lawn chairs and be prepared to relax and enjoy the evening. Children will be entertained with a variety of organized games to give parents some free time to participate in the cow judging and spend some time with old friends and make some new ones.

The field day is open to members and non-members alike. Reservations should be made by June 15. A few tickets may be available until June 18, call Lowell Brubaker at 653-2612. Also, agribusinesses wishing to contribute as a sponsor for the field day should contact Lowell.

To reach the Brubaker farm take route 283 west from Lancaster to the Manheim-Mt. Joy exit. Turn left on Route 772 (Manheim-Mt. Joy Rd.). At the first crossroads turn right onto Strickler Rd. Continue on about 1 mile. Directly across from Pleasant View Estates is the farm sign and lane to the Brubaker farm.

The centennial Penn-Har-Va Farm, so named by Harold and Virginia Brubaker came into the Brubakers family in 1812. Lowell, Harold and Virginia's son, and his wife, Deb, and their three children, Heather, Crystal and Blake, are devoted to keeping Penn-Mar-Va in the Brubaker family and making it a bicentennial farm .

On 220 acres, the Brubakers grow all corn and alfalfa. The milking herd is mostly 140-head of registered Holsteins with production at 18,400 pounds of milk with 600 pounds of fat.

A new calf barn was built two years ago and a gravity-fed manure system was installed late last summer which serves two dairy barns. The new system allows the Brubakers to drop their daily barn cleaning and spreading. Manure spreading is minimized to twice a year.

"I never had it so easy," said Lowell about handling the cattle in the new dairy barn. Due to an abundance of heifers in the past two years, calves share the new barn with some two-year-olds and the one-lever locking headgates takes the chore out of handling the young animals.

The Brubakers are looking forward to welcoming farmers and their families to the farm. They are hoping for a bright, clear evening. There is no rain date. The Lancaster County Holstein Field Day will be held, come rain or shine, but to be there you've got to make your reservations now!

Nittany Lion Fall Classic Provides An Investment In The Future

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — What do you get when you combine the enthusiastic and highly motivated Penn State Dairy Science Club, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, and a worthy cause? ANSWER: The Sixth Annual Nittany Lion Fall Classic for the benefit of expanding the Ag Arena Complex, to be held Friday, November 10, 1989 at Penn State's Ag Arena.

Beginning as a dream in 1983, the Nittany Lion Fall Classic has become a showcase for an efficiently managed consignment sale and some of Pennsylvania's highest quality dairy animals. A cooperative effort between the Dairy Science Club and PHA, the Fall Classic provides a "hands-on" learning experience in cattle merchandising, selection, advertising, animal preparation and business management.

This year, this highly successful consignment sale will provide an opportunity for the Club to contribute their time and energy to the development of the third phase of the award-winning Ag Arena Complex. This pending addition will be a new Exhibition Building, measuring 220 feet long and 154 feet wide.

The Center's convenient mid-Pennsylvania location would make it an ideal site for agricultural trade shows and other educational events for adults and juniors that are not now feasible because of the limited space. The State Junior Dairy Show, for example, could be held at the Center.

Fund raising is already underway, with over $100,000 committed to date. Says Dave Mattocks, Sale Chairman, "The Club sees this as a terrific opportunity to raise funds for a complex that is used by the entire College of Agriculture, as well as Pennsylvania Ag Industries; it is our way of instilling a lasting contribution." Club members will be donating their efforts in organizing the sale, while dairy producers throughout the Commonwealth will be asked to make a tax deductible contribution through a consignment to the 1989 Nittany Lion Fall Classic. Consignors will be asked to contribute at least 1/4 of their consignment's selling price towards the new building project.

Appropriate recognition will be given to all consignors as follows: Leadership gifts of $10,000 or more carry with them opportunities for naming one or more of the 16 aisles proposed for the new building. In addition to these $10,000 sponsor gift, other gifts will be recognized as Affiliate-$3,000-$9,000; Friend-$1,000-$2,999; Patron-$300-$999.

Mattocks encourages all breeders to mark their calendars for this important event, and to become involved as a consignor and buyer. For further information about this investment in the future, Mattocks can be reached at (717) 836-3310 or call the Pennsylvania Holstein Association at (814) 234-0364.

Law To Limit Land Seizure

ond application to have the land condemned by ALCAB.

"The desirability of that site is so compelling, I am sure the school district is not going to give up on it," Freund said.

Dr. David Fallinger, district superintendent, agrees. "We needed a school three years ago," Fallinger said. "We have 18 substandard spaces and build 100 homes per year. Right now we have 1000 subdivided lots in the district.

Fallinger said he grew up on a farm in Lancaster County and has farmers on the school board. But the dilemma he says they face is that everywhere they go they must take farmland. "It just costs our taxpayers less to take the land right next to the school," Fallinger said.

As for the contention that the school district has enough land right now, Fallinger said that land is not owned by the school district. This land that the school now uses for athletics is owned by the Northwestern Rec. Commission made up of four townships, citizens at large and two board members. Fallinger said they had considered taking the land owned by the Commission. But this land is somewhat on a continental divide: it doesn't flow into the sewer system needed for the school.

Fallinger said that the district had looked at alternate sites for the new school but had not paid money to document the findings. So, to overcome the objection of the court that the school district had not studied alternative sites, Urban Research Associates was retained to look for alternatives. After reviewing 43 potential sites, the district said in papers filed with the court, the consultant concluded that the Snyders' land was the best spot to locate the new school.

But for now, the Snyders' potato rows remain 1,100 feet long instead of 200 feet long. And the state farmland preservation act with provision for ag security areas remains a viable way to keep farmland under the plow instead of under development.

Is Cup Cheese For Everyone?

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Something old, something new brings good luck to brides on their wedding days. Bill Zimmerman is counting on the same combination for a prosperous future.

He is combining the old recipes passed down through Shenk Cheese Company since 1929 with a new thrust on promotion.

While health-conscious individuals cast a wary eye on cheese that is mostly high in cholesterol and fat, Zimmerman points with pride to his varieties that are both cholesterol-free and fat-free.

"Our products are extremely interesting," he said. "Unlike other cheeses, they are made from 100 percent skim milk and have a subtle flavor. They have no preservatives or additives and very little salt."

Most Lancaster Countians are familiar with cup cheese, schmierkase and ball cheese. These cheeses were brought to the area by German immigrants. Ball cheese (handkase)is a fresh, hand-rolled, nonfat cheese produced with a dry-curd center. Schmierkase is a nonfat cottage-type cheese with the consistency and flavor of sour cream, but without the fat and cholesterol. Cup cheese (kochkase)is a soft cheese packaged in a cup.

German farm families produced the cheese from the skim portion of milk, after separating the whey from the curd. After draining the whey, the curds were pressed until dry enough to crumble easily.

The curd was placed in bowls or crocks to ripen in a warm place near the stove. Periodically it was stirred and mixed with salt and soda. In about three days, a cheese-like consistency and color developed, after which the cheese was cooked with milk or water and poured into cups or bowls.

Today, Shenks cup cheese is made according to the same basic principles. It is sold at farmers' markets in Lancaster, York, Leola and in most major supermarkets in eastern PA.

Cup cheese, available in mild, medium, and sharp flavors, is generally spread on crackers, bread, pretzels, and other snack foods. It can also be eaten on omelettes, celery and on sandwiches.

Zimmerman, an engineer in the specialty metals business, had never heard of the Shenk's and their specialty cheeses until last year when the Shenk family business was advertised for sale. After close scrutiny, and many sample tastings, Zimmerman saw it as a viable business venture and purchased the company.

He said, "The market is very localized and grew mainly through word of mouth advertising." With the interest in lowering cholesterol and fats in diets, Zimmerman believes Shenk's cheeses with no cholesterol presents the ideal solution for cheese lovers who must forgo eating standard cheeses that contain 30 to 35 percent fat.

An ad agency is studying how to package and market Shenk's products to new areas such as health food stores, gourmet cheese markets and others.

Although Zimmerman desires to expand the market into other areas, he admits, "Cup cheese isn't for everyone."

When he first tasted it, he wasn't really impressed by it's bland flavor and unusual paste-like texture. But, he found, like many others find, that a craving for the cheese develops over time.

"I absolutely love it now," Zimmerman said as he pulled out a newspaper clipping. In it, a Philadelphia news reporter who visited Lancaster Central Market in April, wrote that cup cheese "smells like a meadow after a spring rain and tastes deliciously like a heart of a perfectly ripe brie."

"It's people like these that Zimmerman desires to introduce his cheeses.

Tourists who visit the area often purchase cup cheese and then continue to mail order from the company.

"We ship to almost all the states as far away as Alaska," Zimmerman said. He has a stack of letters, sent from across the U.S., telling how much people love cup cheese.

"Cup cheese is primarily a fresh cheese," Zimmerman explained. "While most cheeses are aged at least 60 days, the mild cup cheese is made and shipped out the same week. Sharp cup cheese requires five to six weeks of aging. It has a refrigeration life of eight weeks.

Like other cheeses, cup cheese sometimes varies in taste depending on the milk and on the curing of the curd. "The average customer can not taste the difference, but the regular customer can," Zimmerman said.

"We use the same recipe and it's still made by the Shenk family," Zimmerman said. Dale Shenk, a grandson of the original Shenk family, is the special taster who blends the right cultures and curds to get a consistent taste from the cup cheese.

Weekly, Shenk's use 20,000 pounds of skim milk in their stainless steel vats that contain 1,400 gallons of milk per vat.

The cheese making process begins with raw skim milk poured into vats where the culture is added. In aging, the curds separate from the whey. The whey is pressed, ground and dried. "We only get 6½ pounds of whey from every 100 pounds of skim milk," said Shenk.

The round curd is cured, dated and set in the cooler room. When properly cured, a blend of the curds are cooked according to the tester's tastes and the need for mild, medium or rare cheese. It cooks in slightly over one hour until smooth. During this stage, pasteurization is reached in cooking. Then the cup cheese is transported from the cooker and the containers are filled and refrigerated.

Another area of the business enterprise is specialty foods with jams, jellies, and with fruit butters, relishes.

Zimmerman said, "These products may not be as healthy for you as cup cheese, but they taste good. They have no preservatives, chemicals or additives. They are made from local fresh fruits and vegetables bought from local farmers and auctions."

Their 51 varieties of jams and jellies are unique because they are made only from fruit, sugar, citric acid and pectin. Most other companies use corn syrup and preservatives.

Since purchasing the business, Zimmerman has introduced pumpkin butter, a marmalade combining oranges, lemons, pumpkins and sugar. In addition to being used as a spread, it can be used to make pumpkin pies and filled cookies.

Also introduced is a line of no sugar jams. Zimmerman clarifies that by explaining, "We can't call it jams since the FDA said jams must have sugar; these don't so we call them fruit spreads."

Their specialties include Pennsylvania Dutch favorites such as green tomato relish, pickled watermelon rind, natural peanut butter, chow-chow, stuffed peppers and honey.

Free samples of their products are offered at farmer's markets. Zimmerman said, "I want to sell our products to those who like it rather than sell it and not have customers like it."

Is it for everyone?

Responds Zimmerman, "Try it and see."

He's counting on Shenk's old Pennsylvania Dutch favorites becoming part of today's modern diets.

Owner of Shenk's Cheese Company William Zimmerman shows the Pennsylvania Dutch nonfat cheeses that he believes will be of interest to those looking for healthy diets.

Robert Shenk, (left) a member of the original Shenk family, uses 20,000 pounds of skim milk weekly to make cup cheese as William Zimmerman, who purchased the company last year, looks on.

Special taster Dale Shenk makes sure each batch of cheese meets the Shenk family's high standards that have been in effect since 1929.

PA Milk Production Increases In April

HARRISBURG — Milk production in Pennsylvania during April totaled 890 million pounds, an increase of 5 percent over April 1988 production, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

The number of milk cows in the state during the month averaged 695,000 head, 9,000 less than March and 17,000 less than April a year ago.

Production per cow averaged 1,280 pounds, down 10 pounds from March but up 90 pounds per cow from April 1988.

In the 21 states surveyed, April milk production totaled 10.8 billion pounds, 2 percent more than a year earlier. The number of milk cows averaged 8.54 million head, 1 percent less than April 1988. Production per cow was 1,263 pounds, nine pounds less than March but 33 pounds more than the previous April.

During the January-March period, the 21 states produced 85.1 percent of the nation's production. If producers in the 29 states not surveyed on May 1 followed the trend shown by the 21 reporting states, U.S. milk production for April would be 12.7 billion pounds.

Seeking To Maintain Lancaster County's Diversity

BY LISA RISSER

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Like many newcomers to the area, Dr. Tom Daniels likes what he sees. He enjoys the diversity of Lancaster County with its rural and urban mixture.

Daniels is in a position to be able to help retain the county's uniqueness as director of the Agricultural Preserve Board.

"I think farmland preservation becomes important to maintaining diversity," he stated. "My goal is to maintain diversity, and one way I hope to do so is by building a consensus in the farm community on farmland preservation."

Daniels comes to his new post, which he began three weeks ago, armed with knowledge on regional and community planning, a subject that he taught as an associate professor at Kansas State University. Before that he taught at Iowa State University. His special emphasis was in rural and small town planning.

"One of the most difficult things I think farmers face is that it takes a long-term commitment of time and money to farm, and if they see development coming their way, they're not sure what to do," said Daniels.

In his role, which Daniels considers primarily advisory, this Vermont native hopes to provide farmers with information so that they can make decisions. One option he will strongly suggest is that farmers form ag security areas.

"I'm going to be doing outreach programs to interest farmers in ag security areas on easement sales and to talk to farmers about starting ag security areas," Daniels explained. "Forming these areas is a local decision, however, and I want to provide information so they can make informed decisions.

"The more I am able to speak with members of the farming community and show them that their decision isn't just development versus farming that there is a middle ground, the better I'll be able to help maintain the county's diversity."

According to Daniels there are three benefits to being in an ag security area: farms within ag seurity areas will be less likely to have to worry about nuisance laws, will have somewhat greater protection against condemnation, and will be able to sell easements.

So far approximately 278,000 out of 600,000 Lancaster County acres have been planned for ag use. Currently about 400,000 acres are in actual farm use. Many of these acres are being eyed by developers.

"If you're going to develop, I think it's wise to do it in a slow and careful way," stated Daniels. "Those communities that have just sprawled have high public service costs such as schools and roads. Carefull planning can conrol those costs, and the Ag Preservation Board can influence where development goes. I want to push for in-fill development, which I feel is a much more cost-effective form of development."

In-fill development would require developers to build on land that has been skipped over in previous projects. For instance, in some cases a residential home builder may go a mile or more beyond present development to construct houses "out in the country." It is these parcels of land in between that Daniels would like to see developed first.

Daniels and the Ag Preservation Board are interested in preserving as much of the 278,000 acres in Lancaster County as is possible. They expect to receive about $2 million in state funds with additional monies coming from county coffers. Daniels estimates that the group should be able to buy easements from about seven farms per year.

In order to receive state funding, Lancaster County is revising its guidelines to more closely match state requirements. The key to their updated guidelines will be a slightly different system for ranking farms that want to sell easements. Daniels has proposed that 55 percent of the decision be based on the likelihood of the farm's being developed, followed by quality of the farmland (30 percent) and historic, scenic, and environmental qualities, cost, stewardship, and number of times the application is made (15 percent).

Daniels also is making recommendations that, as a general rule, not more than 15 percent of the total monies be spent on one easement and that perhaps there should be requirements that the farm employ conservation and nutrient management practices.

Twenty-three farms have applied for easements already and have been ranked according to the county's present set of guidelines. "Before we purchase easements, we have to have our new guidelines and ranking system and rerank the farms," said Daniels. "But I don't expect that the new ranking will change the top 10 farms."

The Ag Preservation Board is hoping to purchase easements on 15 farms this year, or a total of about 1,400 to 1,500 acres. Most of this acreage is in the area of West and East Donegal and Mount Joy where there are strong development interests.

"Lancaster County is an extremely desirable place to live," commented Daniels. "One of the key ingredients that makes it desirable is the strength of its farming community. We have to remember that you don't have farmland without people farming the land."

Dr. Tom Daniels is the new director of the Agricultural Preservation Board. The map beside him will become very familiar to him as he works to maintain the diversity of lifestyles in Lancaster County.

Do Mastitis, Inflammation, Infection All Mean The Same Thing?

ELKTON, MD — Many times terminology is a problem when discussing or writing about mastitis. Webster's Collegiate and Dorland's Medical Dictionary both define mastitis as "inflammation of the mammary gland." "Inflammation" and "infection" frequently occur together, but either may be present in the absence of the other. Clarity demands a clear distinction in the use of "mastitis" and "infection." Milk cell counts, clots, udder swelling, and other symptoms are measures of "inflammation," which also may be clinical or subclinical.

Both dictionaries refer to "clinical" as that which may be observed. We can observe udder swelling, hardness or changes in the appearance of the milk without the aid of laboratory analysis, thermometers or other diagnostic helps. An elevated cell count, in the absence of observable signs, indicates "subclinical mastitis," whether or not a positive culture is obtained.

The presence or absence of "infection" is determined by culture. An infection also may be clinical or subclinical depending upon whether signs of inflammation are observed.

Two other terms may be misused. The original, basic meaning of "acute" is sudden onset, also often implying severe and of a short duration. "Chronic" always implies a long duration. "Chronic subclinical mastitis" may therefore imply a long-standing problem without clinical signs of mastitis. "Chronic subclinical mastitis" may be interspersed with periodic flare-ups of "clinical mastitis."

Machine-Induced Mastitis

A majority of machine-induced infections occur near the end of milking. Toward the end of milking, when a teat cup liner slips as the liner opens, small droplets of milk may be propelled back against the end of the teat. These droplets may contain mastitis organisms and, in some instances, may enter the teat. Since milk flow is minimal, chances of the organism being flushed out of the quarter are reduced and an infection may result. These milk droplets have been associated with increased mastitis in many studies.

Washing Teats

In milking parlors, the common method of washing is to use a hose (delivering sanitizing solution) and hands to remove debris from teats. Only the teats should be washed, as wetting the whole udder makes it difficult to dry the udder adequately before milking machines are attached. Milking wet udders and teats may lead to increased mastitis and bacteria counts in bulk milk.

New Device Detects Pulsator Failures

For the first time, dairymen can detect pulsator failures without interrupting milking. The Pulse Indicator from Alfa-Laval enables dairymen to determine at a glance as milking progresses if any pulsator is malfunctioning. The device consists of a short, clear plastic tube which contains a fluorescent red plastic ball. The Pulse Indicator is inserted into the pulsation air line about 8 inches from the pulsator and can be installed in a matter of seconds.

As air travels through the line, the red ball moves back and forth, indicating the air flow to and from the milking claw. If the ball does not move, or it it moves erratically, the dairyman knows there is a pulsation problem and can take corrective action before serious damage occurs.

The Pulse Indicator can be used in either a stanchion-tie stall barn or parlor. It works equally well when inserted into the pulsation air line horizontally, vertically or at any angle in between. Air restriction through the device is minimal. A ratio within 5 percent of the designed ratio usually is considered normal. The device results in a change in the pulsation ratio of less than 0.5 percent. For example, 70:30 pulsation would become 69.5:30.5 List price for a package of four is $8.35.

Many Heifers With Mastitis Infected As Calves

Many infections commonly occur two weeks prior to, and two weeks following, calving in both heifers and adult cows. However, many calves are at risk during the first month after birth and at three to nine months of age. At these two times, heifers are far enough removed from the milking herd that they are often not given the attention they deserve. Since mastitis may not appear until calving, long exposure to the organism control is difficult.

The types of mastitis in heifers generally reflect the mastitis organisms in the milking herd. Heifers fed Streptococcus agalactiae infected milk and housed in a common pen showed high levels of Streptococcus agalactiae mastitis at calving, even when the calves were exposed to the mastitic milk only during the first few weeks of life. At calving, these quarters may be subclinical or clinical, or may be observed as blind or agalactic.

Staphylococcal mastitis also can be spread by suckling, but infections occur more often during puberty and often are related to teat-end injuries. These calves often are housed together under less-than-clean conditions. Flies and bedding probably are major sources of the infection. Herdsmen experiencing difficulty in controlling flies in heifer-raising facilities have experienced higher levels of mastitis due to Staphylococcus aureus and other staphylococcal organisms. Low-producing and blind quarters are not uncommon as a result Staphylococcus aureus infections.

4-H director was pleasantly surprised at the amount and quality of berries shown at the roundup. "The berries were a week late this year," she said. "The peak won't be until next week, and we weren't sure the 4-H'ers would even get enough berries for their entries."

The Rotarians, who will again bid on berries next week, paid a record $979 for the 36 quarts in the roundup.

Lollipop Helps Klinger Win Centre County Dairy Princess Crown

By Marianne Walker
Centre Co. Correspondent

Pleasant Gap (Centre) — Centre County's new dairy princess is Stacey Klinger, the daughter of Allen and Gretchen Klinger of Pine Grove Mills. Crowned June 3, Stacey's humorous promotion skit had the pageant's audience laughing with delight.

Stacey Klinger, the 1989-90 Centre County Dairy Princess, is the daughter of Alen and Gretchen Klinger of Pine Grove Mills.

Dressed appropriately as a farmer, and using a life-size plywood Holstein heifer ("Lollipop", a replica of her own heifer of the same name), Klinger stressed that the proper diet and care of a cow leads to high milk production, high butterfat test, and low somatic cell count.

Stacey's improptu question from the judges was "What do you plan to be doing ten years from now?" to which she quickly responded, "I plan to have my own dairy herd and be happy."

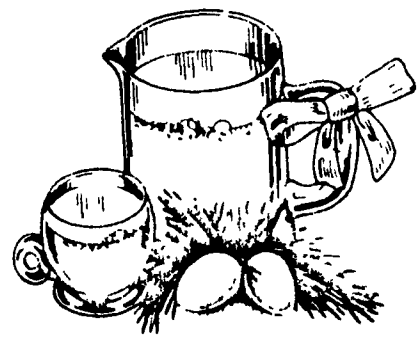
Stacey is a June graduate of State College High School; she plans to study Dairy Production at Penn State. At State High she was active in the Little Lions FFA chapter, served as chapter Parlimentarian, and participated in meat and livestock contests, and dairy judging. She works part-time at Cindy and Sheldon Corl's Da-Lo Farms in Pine Grove Mills.

Alternate Dairy Princesses for the upcoming year are Joy Gates and Beth Ann Kline. Joy is the daughter of Arva and Dorothy Gates of Warriors Mark while Beth is the daughter of Kenneth and April Kline of Millheim.

Awards included $250 in cash for the princess and $75 for the alternates. The contestants were presented with a variety of prizes provided by Centre County merchants.

The pageant was followed by an ice cream social sponsored by Don Boller's Dairy Queen of State College.

Judges for the pageant included Paul Corbin, Jefferson County Chairman, Pa. Dairy Promotion Program Commodity Marketing Board; Charlie Lockhart, Indiana County Chairperson, Indiana County Dairy Promotion Committee; and Janet Reynolds, Union County Chairperson, Sun Dairy Promotion Committee. Master of Ceremonies for the evening was Shawn Ishler.



June is dairy month

"We live on a small farm in Westmoreland County. My husband has lived on the farm for almost 50 years. I moved from the 'big city of Pittsburgh' to be his partner 20 some years ago. We have grown, at various times, to 1,000 strawberry plants, three children, beef cattle (around 40 head), many transient cats, along with chipmunks and ground hogs."

Some marriages are made in heaven. Count among them berries and cream. No matter how many summers come and go, this classic couple is as compatible as ever.

No berries and cream dessert repertoire would be complete without the all-American favorite strawberry shortcake. American Indians, who made a strawberry bread of crushed berries mixed with meal, gave early settlers the idea. The Colonists modified it and the happy result was strawberry shortcake, consisting of a tender, crumbly biscuit, sliced fresh strawberries and heavy cream.

Double Berry Shortcake
6 servings

Shortcake:
4 cups all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
5 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter
1½ cups milk
2 tablespoon butter, melted and cooled
Filling:
1 pint fresh strawberries
2 teaspoons granulated sugar
1 cup fresh blueberries
1 cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons confectioners sugar

Preheat oven to 450°F. Combine flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk; mix until a soft dough is formed. Turn out on lightly floured surface and knead gently several times. Roll to 1-inch thickness. Cut out six 3-inch circles and six 2½ -inch circles with a floured cutter. (If necessary, reroll dough to make specified number of circles.) Arrange circles on buttered cookie sheet. Brush with melted butter. Bake 15 to 18 minutes, or until golden and firm to the touch. Cool on wire rack.

Meanwhile, slice strawberries and sprinkle with 2 teaspoons granulated sugar. Wash and drain blueberries. Combine whipped cream and confectioners sugar in chilled narrow deep bowl. Whip using chilled beaters until soft peaks form. To serve, spread a small amount of whipped cream on large circle; spread some of sliced berries on each; sprinkle with blueberries. Place smaller circle on top. Spread with whipped cream. Top with strawberries and blueberries. Serve immediately.

The American Dairy Association takes berries and cream to new heights with Double Berry Shortcake.

"When our children were growing, this was one of their favorite desserts, and my father-in-law easpecially liked it. We had three girls and two boys and my father-in-law living together and in many ways it was easier to cook for 8 than it is now. All our children are married except the youngest, who will graduate from college this month. We have 6 grandchildren: three boys and three girls ranging in age from 10 months to 7 years. Fortunately they live near so we see them often. Now I only cook for my husband and daughter, quite a change.

"We had many favorite foods, but cookies were my specialty. My children still raid the cookie jar when they visit."

Franklin County Couple Say, "A Million Thank Yous Would Not Be Enough"

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL,
Franklin Correspondent

GREENCASTLE (Franklin Co.) — On June 1, there was nothing in Norman Kennedy's Franklin County field but a concrete slab, a black-topped driveway, and a pile of materials. Thirty hours later, love had completed a 1,512 square foot wheelchair-accessible home and given it away to a young couple.

Lorin and Sherry Kennedy now have their own home. The three bedroom house would be worth $98,000 on the market, exclusive of the land. At ages 23 and 21 and married only six weeks, they are homeowners with no mortgage.

Lorin had farmed with his parents, Norman and Grace Kennedy, until June 8, 1988, when he fell from the tractor he was driving and the baler ran over him. He and Sherry had been engaged for three weeks.

After 40 days at Hershey Medical Center and five months at Elizabethtown Rehabilitation Hospital, Lorin came home. He is paralyzed from the chest down, and has only partial use of his hands. After their marriage on April 22 of this year, he and Sherry lived with his parents, as the house they had intended to move into would have been difficult and costly to modify to accommodate his wheelchair. Motivated by compassion, Franklin County Builders Association decided to build the couple a new one.

Nearly 200 construction professionals, divided into 13 crews, worked on the house. No single crew worked more than five or six hours. Often, the time allotted to one crew overlapped with another crew; drywallers, for example, worked at the same time as the vinyl siding crew.

Usually, the thirteen crew leaders are competitors, bidding against each other for construction jobs in the area. But for House Raising '89, and for the weeks of planning that preceded the project, they were allies with a common goal.

According to project chairman Marlin Gayman, owner of Gayman Construction Company, "We brought our resources together. Everyone cooperated from the first," he said of the planning stage. One of Gayman's duties during the month of planning was modifying the three month bar chart used in construction to a 30-hour version. He also worked with scheduling and, along with Henry Stouffer, with coordinating the donation of materials from 150 businesses. "The support was overwhelming," Gayman said. "Everyone who was asked, contributed."

While 30-hour houses have been done by other builders' groups, the Kennedy home was the local organization's first attempt.

Lorin and Sherry lived with Lorin's parents, Norman and Grace, and sister Norma, from the time of their marriage on April 22.

Marlin Gayman presents a plaque to Lorin and Sherry during opening ceremonies at 12 noon on Saturday.

Newlyweds Lorin and Sherry Kennedy enter their new home at noon on Saturday, June 3, 30 hours after construction on it began.

Before the 6 a.m. whistle blowwing, the crew of 43 workers await the start of House Raising '89. The building site had been prepared before the house raising. The driveway and sidewalks were completed, the well drilled, the foundation slab poured, and the septic system installed.

House Raising '89 officially started when Gayman blew a whistle at 6 a.m. Friday, June 2, after encouraging the framing crew of 43 men, "Take time to do it right, but hurry!" By 6:05, five of the preconstructed exterior wall panels were standing. The crew leader had a blueprint with letters and numbers corresponding to markings on the panels, and the interior and exterior panels went together like a giant jigsaw puzzle.

Despite Gayman's words, no one seemed to hurry. The yellow "House Raising '89" T-shirts that the workers wore bobbed in and out through the interior wall panels, silhouetted against the dark backdrop of the adjoining woods. The atmosphere was one of intensity, not haste.

At 7:12, a crane lifted the first roof truss onto the house. By 7:45, the house was ahead of schedule. "I never expected to have trusses on the house at this time," Gayman commented. The final truss went up shortly after 8:00.

As each crew finished their shift, they were served all the food they could eat by the women of the Kennedy's church, Antrim Brethren in Christ. All food was donated by local businesses and individuals.

By 2:30 in the afternoon, the house was still far ahead of schedule. The vinyl siding, slated for completion at 6 p.m. was nearly finished.

About 1 a.m. Saturday, the plumbers and electricians went to work. At the same time, vinyl flooring was laid in the kitchen. Cabinets were installed during the early morning hours. Carpeting — the last phase in the actual construction of the house — was done by 7:00 a.m., 25 hours after Gayman had blown the whistle.

The women of the Builder's Auxiliary cleaned the house while drapery installers and landscapers worked. All jobs were completed by 11:30, well within the 30-hour limit.

The weeks of pre-planning had paid off. Few things went wrong

The Long Green Line™

Franklin County Couple

at House-Raising '89, and those that did were quickly fixed. "The garage door header hadn't been shipped," Gayman said. "One of the guys ran in to Greencastle for one, and a half hour from the time we realized the header was missing, we had one in place."

The quality of the workers was a factor in the speed and smoothness of the house construction. "These are all top-notch crews," said Ken Oyler, a lifetime director of the Builder's Association, "the plumbers, the electricians, the carpenters — everyone."

At noon Saturday, Gayman blew the whistle again to mark the end of the 30-hour period. A crowd had assembled on the driveway for the presentation ceremony. After the singing of "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," Gayman spoke about the workers. "We're competitors," he said. "But at the first crew leader's meeting, we came to an agreement, and here it is," he said of the completed house. "Everyone did his job even better than I'd expected."

Even though the house was completed ahead of schedule, it was a high-quality job, according to Larry Shoemaker, public relations director, who also spoke at the presentation. "There were no shortcuts," he said. "Everyone did a great job."

After the ceremony, Lorin took Sherry on his lap and carried her over the threshold of their new home. After they had a chance to look around for several minutes, the public was allowed in to view the completed home.

The specifications of the American National Standards Institute were used to tailor the house to Lorin's needs. Special features include a roll-in shower; knee space under the bathroom vanity, the utility sink in the laundry room and the breakfast bar in the kitchen; wide doorways; a door to the outside from the master bedroom; doorknobs that are opened by pushing down; sidewalks nearly the whole way around the house; and light switches and electrical outlets at a height that can be reached from a wheelchair.

The bathroom and the master bedroom are blue, one spare bedroom is pink and the other green. The kitchen, hall and living room are white. The house has thick, fawn-colored carpet throughout, except for the vinyl flooring in bathroom and kitchen. Double doors from the eating area lead out to a cement patio in the backyard. The washer, dryer and utility sink are concealed behind double bi-fold doors to the right of the eating area. The two-car garage allows plenty of space for the operation of the wheelchair lift that will be added to Lorin and Sherry's van. The van was purchased with funds raised by the Kennedy's church and the Kauffman Ruritan club, and will be modified for Lorin's use.

Lorin and Sherry's attitude about the outpouring of love they have experienced is one of gratitude and humility.

"We want to thank people, but there's no way we can," Sherry said. "Everyone — not just the church people — have come together to help."

"It's hard to accept this," Sherry said in an interview during the raising. "But you just humble yourself and accept it." She feels that the home will give her and Lorin more independence than they have had since their marriage.

Sherry, an administrative secretary for Lutheran Social Services, speaks openly about the rough times she and Lorin have been through. After the accident, Lorin had rejected her for awhile.

"He didn't want me to go through his life with him," she explained. "He thought it would be a terrible thing to put me through, because he loved me. But I was there; I never gave it a second thought. If we had been married at the time of the accident, I'd have stood by him — this was the same thing — I've loved him since the beginning."

"I didn't feel pity for him," she continued. "And I didn't feel obligated. I wanted to stay with him. He was still the same guy I was engaged to."

Sherry, who is trained as a certified medical assistant, learned to help with Lorin's care from the beginning. Lifting is minimal, as he can transfer himself between the bed and the wheelchair with the use of a transfer board. "Lorin's Mom and I worked together," on learning his care, she said. She also credits her parents, Junior and Doris Robinson, for their support.

But Lorin and Sherry are rapidly becoming more independent. "I fixed his wheelchair the other day," she related. "He told me what to do and how to do it, and I fixed it. We complement each other. He was always good with his hands, he worked with the machinery a lot," on the farm. "He helped to milk and feed, but he liked the tractor work."

Lorin is presently undecided as to what his vocation will be, but he has at least two options. "We're looking into a computer class," Sherry said. While that would be very different from the sort of work Lorin was used to, Sherry has confidence that he will go through with it. There is also the possibility of acquiring a modified tractor so that Lorin can again do field work.

"He hasn't given up on walking again," Sherry said. "He felt a touch go through him at a healing service." While Sherry is also believing for his healing, she is content to go on the way things are until that time.

After Lorin got hurt, people told Sherry to drop him, she relates. Some went so far as to tell her she was ruining her life by marrying him, citing "all the work" she would have to do!"

It isn't that bad!" Sherry says. "I get tired, but it's not a big strain. Lorin comes first. My strength comes from the Lord, and this has drawn me closer to Him."

"People were surprised to see that Lorin feeds himself," she said with a smile. "I don't have to do everything!"

Lorin's strength has been returning over the past few months. He was in good physical shape before the accident, but lost weight while in the hospital. "At Elizabethtown he could only lift three to five pound weights with each arm," Sherry said. "Now he does fifteen pounds per arm."

"He was always independent, and it's hard for him to accept people doing things for him," she acknowledged.

He did not want the house when he first heard of the plans to build it. He was embarrassed — to be debt-free at their ages.

"I felt funny, too," Sherry said. "But we had to swallow our price — what else could we do? These people genuinely wanted to help us. A million thank-yous would not be enough."

But no one at the raising seemed to want a million thank-yous. Sherry was right — these people genuinely wanted to help this young couple. The prevailing attitude was "I enjoy helping others." The builders saw a need, and they filled it to the best of their ability, using the gifts God had given each one.

The slate-blue house that is the product of the united use of those gifts will stand as a symbol of the God-inspired love that Franklin County poured out to Lorin and Sherry Kennedy one weekend in June 1989.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

For weeks, I'd waited for this moment.

And it felt wonderful.

Hot rays of sunshine were already beginning to bring color back to my winter-white arms. A light breeze ruffled the maple leaves and set the willows off to graceful dancing. The pair of robins perching on the power line overhead sang sweetly to each other, oblivious to human enjoyment of their melodious sound effects.

And the ground was soft and warm and of perfect texture.

Blades of spade and hoe sliced easily through the pale, sun-dried top of the soil and on down into the crumbly, organic-rich topsoil. At almost bottom-ground level of the contoured hillside slope rising to the east, the garden site lies in some of the very best of the productive soils with which this farm has been blest.

That the garden is so favorably located is a combination of fate, good fortune and simple logistics. Only one pole of the rural electric cooperative power line, which ends here at the farm, is sited in a field where it must be worked around for crops planting. That field is just beyond the lawn border. Rather than maneuver all around the pole with equipment, the Farmer years ago proclaimed it the garden site - more or less by default.

Actually, it's ideal. We can have fresh tomatoes and cantaloupes from patch to kitchen in under 30 seconds.

Years of planting, mulching, manuring and recycling organic materials through the garden have further enriched the naturally-loamy ground. Earthworms are abundant and fat, prized dinnerfare for the robin chorus line. Stones of even fist-size are not overly abundant, a notable plus to someone who grew up in a garden carved from terrain named for its ironstone boulders.

But the garden tends to the "wet" side, and is usually one of the last spots to be worked. So, each spring I watch others till and plant much earlier, and wait impatiently for the day when a few swipes with chisel, disk and harrow have at last readied it for planting.

Like countless farmers of this delayed season, I longed to be planting, yet felt immense gratitude for the replenishing of groundwater levels. For, after successive years of imploring the Almighty for rain, there would be no complaining at the abundance of May's moisture.

When natural springs opened in places where they hadn't existed for more than a decade, surrounding the garden on three sides with trickling waters, the whole planting project just went on hold for a bit longer.

Bright sunshine and drying breezes eventually worked their wonders. In a glorious stretch of weather, I hoed out crooked furrows and dug in stretches of black plastic sheeting. Carried buckets of water for seedlings. Pushed wheelbarrow loads of grass and straw to hold down mulch of paper bags.

Packets of bean seeds, gangly tomato plants and hills of cucumbers went into the garden's warm ground. Pepper plants, clusters of cantaloupe seedlings, sprouting gladioli bulbs and asters keep company near rows of statice and strawflowers for winter bouquets. Pumpkins are sprouting in a stretch of heavy plastic where last year's tomatoes fought valiantly to produce in prolonged heat and drought.

Kneeling on the soft, warm soil of a garden restores a measure of humility into one's perspective. We can till the soil, cover the seed and gently tuck in the fragile white roots of started seedlings. We can water and dust, hoe and mulch, weed and watch.

But we cannot make anything grow - only marvel that, at least in most years, it does so abundantly. Perhaps it is having a hand in this miracle of growth that keeps gardeners and farmers going back - on their knees and horsepower - to plant, year after year.

The trickle from springs is slowing to just wet spots. The beans are up, and the tomatoes developing thick, sturdy stems.

The garden is planted for another season. And it feels wonderful.

Breaking New Ground At Friendly Meadows Plantation Farm

BY LISA RISSER

LEBANON — With a gentle squeeze from the rider, the horse breaks out of a walk, and it is poetry in motion. There is no bouncing trot, but instead a gliding walk that invites the rider to enjoy endless hours of almost effortless riding.

It's the horse's smooth middle gait that has generated enthusiasm for the Plantation Walking Horse, and its popularity is growing quickly among weekend trail riders. Les Weber, co-owner of Friendly Meadows Plantation Farm, is delighted to see the increased interest in the breed, which is the only breed with which he has ever worked or wanted to work.

Such is Weber's love for the Plantation Walker that, in partnership with Valerie and Roger Grimes, he has created the only full equine center in the Northeast based around the breed. "It was my dream to build one some day," Weber explained.

The Grimes had kept Thoroughbreds, but quickly became Walker converts after meeting Weber and riding the horses. They too began to dream of a Walker equine center. Soon dream became reality when the center opened its doors last November. "It takes different talents to throw together a barn and operation this size," commented Valerie. "We felt we could do it together."

The three work as a team with each person taking charge of an area, although the others pitch in as needed. Roger, a contractor who builds homes, brought his construction know-how and a familiarity of horses to the operation, and he and Valerie are responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of the building, running the tack shop, and supervising the boarding part of the farm. Weber, who contributed his knowledge of horses and contacts, is in charge of buying and selling animals as well as the breeding program.

A boarder exercises her mount in the farm's indoor ring.

Diane Sept, a well-known Walker trainer from Calgary, Alberta, was hired to work with the farm's horses as well as boarders and their mounts.

The main portion of the farm is located on about 30 acres and includes the 53-stall horse barn and 12 large paddocks, some of which are still being finished. The barn includes a large indoor ring, tack shop, office space, kitchen, bathrooms with showers, a heated viewing room, apartment, wash stall, tack area with lockers for boarders' equipment, and hot walker. About half of the barn is used to board horses, while the other half houses the farm's Walker stallions, sales horses, and show prospects.

About 20 minutes away is Weber's original farm, which is where brood mares and foals are kept. Yearlings are housed in a bank barn near the Grimes' home.

The center offers boarding, training, equitation or seat lessons, clinics, breeding, and sales of horses and tack.

Friendly Meadows has up to 25 horses for sale at any one time. Weber makes a trip to Tennessee and Kentucky every couple of months looking for animals to buy for resale. He keeps in mind what clients want when he looks for horses, and generally returns with some mares and stallions but mostly geldings between two and nine years old.

Currently Friendly Meadows boasts several horses for which they have high hopes of becoming champions. One, a yearling named Friendly Meadows Sue, was named the high point weanling for the Plantation Walking Horse Association last year. Their three-year old gelding, Perfection By Choice, recently placed sixth in regional competition.

Valerie rings up a sale in the tack shop for Sonja, who boards her horse at the farm.

Everyone at Friendly Meadows is quick to point out that the Walkers they have are Plantation Walking Horses, not "the other ones." The horses to which they refer are called Big Lick Walking Horses, which are used only for show and feature animated, almost exaggerated, gaits.

"There was a division of uses in the breed," said Weber. "The Big Lick horse was developed in the '40s or '50s, some say as a response to spectator demand. But there is a growing public opinion away from the Big Lick Walking Horse toward the Plantation Walker."

The Plantation Walking Horse was developed as an all-around horse, and its special gait was developed to get the plantation owners around their property with speed and ease. The running walk is a four-step gait that replaced the two-step trot in other horses. This gait makes riding a joy even for beginners who don't know how to post. In addition to being used on trail rides and as show aninals, Walkers are used in activities such as bird dog competitions where judges, spectators, and handlers spend long hours on horseback following the dogs around. Walkers also are used by policemen, forest rangers, in harness, and in cattle country on drives.

Sept, who trains all breeds, is enthusiastic about Walkers. "The breed I most like to work with are Walkers," she said. "The other breeds are fun to work with, though, and there is a challenge to train them, but if I had to pick one, it would be Walkers."

Sept is particularly taken with the Walker's flexibility to be a good mount for a "timid" rider as well as for a rider who demands a show performance. She feels that, "to get a Walker show ring perfect is more intricate than any other breed."

Weber and the Grimes hope their equine center will help promote Plantation Walking Horses in the Northeast. "We feel the Walker has a lot to offer," said Weber. "We want to supply some good Plantation Walking Horses to the public and, because of the increasing number of people interested in showing, we hope to develop a good show string. We also hope to continually upgrade the breeding program and improve the breed."

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Benefits of eating oats have been well proven. But what if you don't like eating oatmeal as cooked cereal every day?

Oats can be added to many conventional and microwaved dishes for healthy eating. The old familiar addition of uncooked oatmeal to meatloaf is a good example. Oatmeal can be used instead of bread crumbs in other dishes, such as stuffed peppers, meatballs or stuffed fish. All of these can be oven-baked or microwaved. Toasted, and seasoned with no-salt herbs, oatmeal makes a nutritious low-sodium casserole topping. Follow directions for the topping from Fish Fillets Italiano (below), varying the seasonings according to your taste.

Oatmeal and oat bran muffins are popular now, although if you buy them unlabeled from a bakery, you really don't know how much oats you're getting. Better to make your own, using a quick microwave recipe. Six muffins micro-bake in about 2 minutes.

Another way to add oats to your diet is to use oat flour in baked and micro-baked foods. Oat flour can be substituted for up to ⅓ of the all-purpose flour in a recipe. It can also be used to thicken sauces. Or it can be mixed with paprika and other seasonings to coat chicken or fish before micro-baking.

To make oat flour, process uncooked quick or old-fashioned oatmeal in a food processor or blender until it is the consistency of flour. Store tightly covered in a cool dark place for up to 6 months.

You can benefit from the fiber and other goodness of oats by occasional eating. However, to get cholesterol-lowering benefits from oats, it must be eaten in large enough amounts on a daily basis, along with a diet low in fat and cholesterol. Nutritionists say the amount of oats needed daily is 2 ounces of oatmeal or slightly more than an ounce of oat bran. This means starting with ⅔ cup uncooked oatmeal or a heaping ⅓ cup uncooked oat bran.

Oats is one of the best sources of soluble fiber, which helps lower blood cholesterol, and along with it risk of heart disease. Other foods that are also good sources of soluble fiber include navy, kidney and pinto beans; rice bran; and fruits with pectin, such as apples and cranberries.

The following low-fat recipes, from Quaker R Oats, show some new ways to add oats to foods. You'll like these recipes — not just for health reasons, but because they taste delicious and are fast to make. I've left conventional directions for those of you who don't have a microwave oven.

Broccoli-Stuffed Tomatoes

6 medium tomatoes
package (10-ounce) frozen chopped broccoli
¼ cup chopped onion
½ cup quick or old-fashioned oatmeal, uncooked
⅓ cup low-fat cottage cheese
¼ teaspoon basil
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
1½ tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 350°F. Slice ¼ inch from stem end of each tomato. Scoop out pulp and seeds; reserve for another use or discard. Place in 1-quart glass baking dish. Cook broccoli with onions according to package directions; drain. Stir in remaining ingredients except Parmesan cheese; mix well. Fill tomatoes with broccoli mixture; sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until heated through.

Microwave: Place broccoli and onion in microwavable 1-quart dish; cover with plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 5 to 6 minutes, stirring once, or until vegetables are tender. Drain well. Prepare tomatoes as recipe directs, reserving Parmesan cheese; place in microwavable 8x8-inch dish. Cover with plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 3½ to 4 minutes, rotating dish ½ turn after 2 minutes or until tomatoes are hot. Sprinkle with reserved cheese. Makes 6 servings.

Each serving: 75 calories, 5g protein, 1g fat, 13g carbohydrate, 49mg sodium, 2mg cholesterol.

Fish Fillets Italiano

2 tablespoons margarine
1¼ cups quick or old-fashioned oatmeal, uncooked
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
2 small zucchini, cut into ¼-inch-wide strips
6 sole or flounder fillets (about 1¼ pounds)
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Saute oatmeal, cheese and seasonings in margarine, stirring frequently until golden brown; set aside.

Preheat oven to 375°F. Sprinkle each fillet with 2 rounded tablespoons oat mixture. Divide zucchini evenly among fillets. Roll up, beginning at wide end; secure with toothpicks. Place seam side down in 8- or 9-inch glass baking dish; sprinkle with lemon juice. Cover with aluminum foil. Bake 20 to 25 minutes until fish fillets turn opaque; remove to serving plate. Top with remaining oat mixture. Serve with lemon wedges, if desired.

Microwave: Melt margarine in microwavable dish; add oatmeal, cheese and seasonings. Microwave (High) 3 to 4 minutes or until golden, stirring after 2 minutes. Remove from dish; set aside.

Prepare fillets as recipe directs; place seam side down in same dish. Cover with wax paper. Microwave (High) 6 to 7 minutes, rotating dish halfway through cooking, or until fillets turn opaque. Proceed as recipe directs. Makes 6 servings.

Each serving: 240 calories, 25g protein, 10g fat, 12g carbohydrate, 146mg sodium, 3mg cholesterol.

Hint: Any leftover topping may be sprinkled over casseroles. For microwaving, add topping after microwaving and sprinkle lightly with paprika. For oven baking, sprinkle on before baking.

The Groff family spends a moment visiting while finishing milking chores.

A Day In The Life Of Dairy Farmer Rachel Groff

BY LOU ANN GOOD

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — It's 4:30 a.m. Rachel Groff doesn't even yawn as she hops out of bed. She pulls on a red skirt, red and white flowered blouse and ties a red bandana around her hair.

It's time to milk the cows. And cows and the early morning solitude are two of Rachel's favorite things.

On the walk to the barn, a few swallows and martins warble an early morning greeting. Rachel smiles with pleasure and remarks, "This is the first year that we put up the martin house. People said we wouldn't get any martins because of the barn swallows, but they were wrong."

Although no day is the same to Rachel, one thing remains constant: the early morning and afternoon milkings for which Rachel takes charge.

"I didn't grow up on a farm," Rachel said. "I wish I had. I love it. I'd rather milk cows and work outside than clean house and cook."

In one hand, she grabs paper towels to prep the cows and in the other the milkers.

After washing the udders she slips the milkers on the cows and occasionally gives them a few tender pats.

"Our routine is kind of complicated," Rachel explained as she pointed toward her husband, J. Richard, who was feeding the cows silage. "We have 95 milking cows plus heifers and calves. We only have room to tie 56, so after we finish milking them, we let them out and bring in 39 from the meadow."

Rachel Groff pampers her calves by bottle feeding them.

Rachel refers to the 56 in the barn as high producers and those in the meadow as low producers. The high producers average about 21,000 pounds of milk. About one half are registered.

Rachel said, "After we built the new barn we didn't think we'd keep switching cows in and out, but when you raise them yourself, you get attached to them and you want to keep them."

They do not keep cows that kick. Several years ago, a cow broke Rachel's leg. "My husband believes it isn't worth keeping kicking cows around," she said.

When milking was finished, Rachel prepared a bottle for the calves. As she walked between the calf hutches, the calves greeted her affectionately. "These aren't as demanding as babies," she said as one slurped milk from the bottle. "You only need to feed them two times a day."

Each is named. Rachel has a baby naming book that she refers to. If the mother's name began with an A, the calf is christened with an "A" name.

As Rachel fed the heifers, she said, "It's rewarding to watch them grow from birth and then enter the milking stream."

The Groffs have a neighbor woman who helps with the milking each morning and evening except Sunday. "She enjoys milking and we enjoy having her," Rachel said. "We couldn't do it alone."

At 7:00 a.m., Rachel rushes into the house to help nine-year-old Ryan get ready for school. Six-year-old Rodney also begins his day.

When Ryan boards the school bus at 7:20, Rachel returns to the barn where she finishes feeding calves and heifers while her husband washes the grates and gutters, and feeds cows hay and silage. Rachel follows with cottonseed. Then the cows are let out in the meadow.

After that, Rachel cleans the milkhouse and feeds the mallard ducks and pair of swans on their spacious pond.

As Rachel throws high-

The pond brings the Groff family much pleasure. Since they do not have time to get away on much vacation, Ryan and Rodney enjoy using the pond for fishing, swimming and skating.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This is going to be a fish story. For many years I've enjoyed fishing. I suppose it started when I was the only girl working at the Farm Bureau office in Lancaster. You see, as I listened to the men talking about their experiences, I wanted to add some of my own and so I bought fishing equipment. The pole cost $1.19, the reel $1.50, line 25¢, hooks 15¢ and sinkers 5¢. This was on April 26, 1941 and the $3.14 bill amounted to one-fifth of my weeks salary.

As my father's meadow bordered the Conestoga River, I had access to a good fishing spot. And, I can still remember throwing my line in the water and immediately getting a big tug that resulted in my pulling out two big catfish.

I have just looked through my old cigar box of fishing items and found several eight ounce sinkers that I used when I went deep sea fishing with other employees. For years I did not get seasick, but when I finally did, it certainly turned me off of that kind of fishing.

Lately I've been going fishing on Sunday evening. One of our summer cottages, behind our dairy barn, has a nice lawn along the river. The last few times that I've gone fishing I've come home with several nice-sized fish. Some are catfish, some suckers, some bass and some small sunfish.

The other Sunday night I saw four nicely dressed Amish children start to play in a pond in their pasture. At first they simply ran through the water squealing and laughing. Then the smallest one fell flat on his face several times and this only added to the hilarity. Soon the water turned to a brownish color and they started using another pond. Their merriment was a pleasure to behold, but I'm wondering what kind of a reception they got when they arrived home soaked head to toe.

If perchance I shouldn't catch any fish, there are always interesting things to see. Many wild ducks fly overhead and also swim by me. A bird feeds its young high in a hollow tree limb. Even a muskrat swims close to the high bank near his hole in the mud. The silence alone is enjoyable.

Rachel Groff

moisture corn to the mallards and their 30 ducklings, she finds renewed energy to meet the days schedule. She said, "Dairy farming can be stressful. There isn't much time to vacation, but it's enjoying things like this throughout the day that can be relaxing."

A breakfast of pancakes or eggs varies between 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. each day.

"I don't stay inside much after breakfast," Rachel said. "I do whatever needs to be done." This week it was working in their five acres of tobacco, helping unload haylage, vet check, giving shots and bookwork. In between, she cooked, cleaned, baked, and did the family wash.

"I don't do a lot of tractor work," she said. My husband does that and then I do his chores. I do whatever needs to be done. That's what I like about farming. No day is typical. Every day is different. It is never boring."

At 11:20, Rodney needs to be transported to afternoon kindergarden.

Lunch, the largest meal of the day for the Groffs, is at 2 p.m. At 3:30 p.m. the milking routine begins and lasts until 7 p.m. Supper, either a crockpot, oven or leftover meal, is between 8 and 9 o'clock. Bedtime is between 10:30 and 11 p.m.

There are no naps or breaks because "there is always something to be done."

Sunday evenings the Groffs spend leisure time popping popcorn, eating pizza, 4-wheeling and reading to the children.

Vacation time is an annual weekend to the shore. When Richard hunts in Potter County several days in the fall, Rachel takes charge of the farm operation. Although things progress smoothly under her administration, she says, "I'd rather be an Indian than a chief."

Before her marriage, Rachel had never milked a cow. She was an LPN at a local nursing home, but she had no qualms about quitting her job and becoming a fulltime dairy farmer. "We talked about it before we got married and I knew that dairy farming was the only thing Richard would ever want to do. I want to support him in that as much as possible."

What started as a supporting venture has grown into a satisfying career for Rachel. She said, "At first, it was hard to imagine that we'd be milking cows for the rest of our lives, but we've been doing it for 12 years now, and I can't imagine not doing it. I love the cows."

Glancing across the open fields of their 130 acres, Rachel said, "We both like being our own boss and working together. There is no typical day because every day is different and that's the way my husband and I like it. It's never boring."

ENJOY CHEESE DURING NATIONAL DAIRY MONTH

Watch for bargains at dairy cases when you shop this month. Your favorite retailer is likely to join the National June Dairy Month Promotion. Various kinds of cheeses may be value priced. By doing some comparative pricing, you will notice a great variety of dairy products at reasonable prices.

Cheese, like the milk from which it is made, is a very nutritious food. Easily digested, even by small children, it provides many of the essential nutrients needed for good health, including protein, minerals, vitamins, and fat.

Cheese is a highly concentrated complete protein food and a good substitute for meat. Protein is necessary for growth and repair of the body.

Cheese is an excellent source of calcium and phosphorus. These important minerals help build bones and teeth and are necessary for the normal functioning of nerves and muscles.

Although different types of cheese vary in vitamin content, cheese is a good source of vitamin A, needed for healthy skin, resistance to infection, and proper vision. It also contains some B-vitamins which are necessary for growth, healthy skin, and normal nerve and blood functions.

Cheese contains milkfat. In the diet, fats add flavor and provide a concentrated energy source. In the body, fats are part of all cells and carry the fat soluble vitamins A, D, E and K.

Cheese will stay fresh and flavorful for up to eight weeks if it is tightly wrapped and kept refrigerated. Air will dry and harden cheese. To prevent this, carefully rewrap opened cheese in its original wrapper, in foil, or in plastic wrap or bags. Make certain the wrap is snug and tightly sealed to keep air out.

If cheese hardens due to exposure to air, cut off hardened sections and grate or chop into small pieces. Store grated cheese in the refrigerator in a clean glass jar or plastic container with a tight fitting lid. Use grated cheese in sauces, soups, or salads. Tightly wrap and refrigerate the remaining cheese.

Cheese is an "anytime" food... delicious for breakfast, lunch, dinner and snacks. You know it is nutritious, it's also convenient, economical and versatile, too. Here are some cooking tips, easy ideas, and a tasty recipe featuring cheese.

Cheese Cooking Tips: Always use low to medium heat. Heat just until cheese melts. Overcooked cheese can become tough. For quick smooth melting; shred, cube or slice cheese, then add to hot foods. To broil cheese: Place the pan several inches below the heat source and broil just until cheese melts.

Quick ideas: Stir cubes of cheese into scrambled eggs. Melt slices of cheese on toast or English muffins. Add a slice of onion or tomato for variety. Sandwich slices of cheese between two slices of your favorite bread. Team with ham, luncheon meat, turkey, or tuna salad for variety. Grill that cheese sandwich. Lightly spread outside of sandwich with margarine, mayonnaise or salad dressing and grill on both sides until golden brown. Toss cubes of cheese with salad greens for a hearty side dish. Add cheese cubes to potato or macaroni salad for extra flavor, color, and nutrition. Make a zesty cheese sauce to pour over hot vegetables, toast or macaroni. Add cubed or shredded cheese to soups, casseroles, or chili for a heartier dish. Serve apple pie with cheddar cheese, a favorite American dessert.

To Live at Home or Not

The caps and gowns are again front page news and families are celebrating the satisfaction of important goals reached in a family members' life.

It is an exciting time and also one full of change. The graduates, be it high school or college, have attained another step in the gradual process of becoming an independent adult.

And Moms and Dads are experiencing another step of parenthood. One important consideration for young adults and their families is their living arrangement.

While some graduates will go off to college, others will live at home and go to school or college and others will start new jobs while living at home. More young adults are residing with their parents now than they did a few years ago. When adults of two generations live together, even closely knit families can avoid unnecessary misunderstandings and frustrations by clarifying what they expect of each other at the outset.

Most people seek a certain amount of predictability in their lives. When situations change, it is important to establish new "rules" by which the group will live.

Once graduation celebrations are complete, take time to discuss and make decisions about basic issues that will affect your life together. As parents and children you are likely to be working through changes in your individual lives at the same time you are trying to work out a smooth living arrangement under one roof. Both generations may need to outgrow old patterns of behavior to make way for more appropriate ones at this stage of life.

By planning together you can openly express your hopes and concerns for your new living situation and make decisions about managing your household.

Dr. Barbara Davis, Penn State Aging and Adult Specialist shares, "Do not expect to agree on everything! You are individuals who have grown up in different eras. You will need some time to work out differences and come to the best compromise when you cannot agree."

Now is the time to set a planning meeting before you settle into a new routine. Some of the issues for discussion and decision will include:

*Target date for departure
*Financial arrangements
*Household responsibilites
*Outside maintenance
*Transportation
*Schedules
*Privacy
*Entertaining
*Lifestyle differences

To prevent misunderstandings later, write down the decisons you make on a Family Agreement Form. You will need to evaluate and reconsider your decisions as situations change over time. This kind of agreement will help you increase mutual appreciation and strengthen bonds between the generations.

For more information and a copy of the family agreement form, request "When Adult Children Live at Home" from your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or request from Penn State Extension, PO Box 520, Leesport, PA 19533.

FFA Alumni

The Pennsylvania FFA Alumni is again becoming very active on a state level. Plans are being finalized to hold the first annual FFA Alumni coverence during FFA Activities Week on June 14. The conference is open to all current FFA Alumni and other interested individuals. Past FFA involvement is not a requirment for an alumni member.

The conference begins with a buffet luncheon featuring Roxann Sommera, nation FFA Alumni eastern regional representative. After lunch, representatives will report on chapter activities, thus sharing ideas with each other. Larry Redding, the state FFA advisor, will address agricultural education issues and Mary Jo Cancelmo, FFA Foundation executive director, will give an update on the FFA Foundation. Reserved seating is being held for those attending the conference at the evening session of the Pennsylvania FFA Convention.

The conference is a one-day event with a cost of $5 per person. Pre-register by contacting, Lisa Acampora, RD 2, Box 139, Canton, PA 17724; 717/673-3158.

Totally Dressed Windows

This year's total window treatments are almost Victorian in their detail. Just a panel at the window is passe. Dressing a window with a panel, a swag, a priscilla and a top treatment is not unusual for a complete, finished, layered look.

Even the top of the window is receiving attention. To create an attractive window ensemble, top treatments like soft toppers are being shown to enhance blinds and shades

Maple Queen Contest Held

MEADVILLE (Crawford) — Tracey Dengler, Saegertown, was named 1989 N.W. Maple Queen and Deanna Johnson, Wattsburg, voted the 1989 Alternate N.W. Maple Queen at the recently held annual Northwest Maple Queen contest and banquet held at the Northwestern Rural Electric Cooperative Association.

Miss Dengler is the daughter of Charles and Judy Dengler and is a junior at Saegertown High School. While in school she has been active in ski club, Spanish Club and a statistician for basketball and volleyball. In addition, she has been a 4-H member for nine years carrying projects with sheep and dairy. She has participated in the 4-H Dairy Bowl and Interstate Exchange. Every year when the maple sap begins to flow, she assists with the family maple syrup operation.

Miss Johnson is the daughter of Owen and Chris Johnson and is a junior at Seneca High School, where she is active in the ski club, softball, volleyball and hockey. She has worked at Rotthoff's Strawberry Farm and helps maintain their township ballfields and lawns. In addition, Deanna babysits and takes care of six horses and assists in the family maple operation.

In order to quaify, contestants must live in northwestern Pennsylvania, have knowledge of the maple syrup operation, have reached their 17th birthday by September 28 and be under 21, single, never married, and represent the maple industry in local and state events.

The candidates were judged on appearance, speaking ability, poise, personality, intelligence and knowledge of the maple industry. Each contestant gave a three to five minute presentation about herself and why she wanted to be the Northeastern Maple Queen.

Judges for the program were Mrs. Paul Woods, Edinboro; Mrs. Emory Kardosh, Conneautville; and Mrs. Reed Gage, Cambridge Springs. These ladies are all wives of maple producers and have been involved in the maple business.

Dennis Northrop, Corry, Association President, was master of ceremonies for the program.

Paula Holabaugh, Guys Mills, 1987 N.W. Maple Queen and 1987-88 Pennsylvania Maple Sweetheart, introduced the judges and the 1989 Maple Queen Contestants.

Vonda Burchard, Guys Mills, 1988 N.W. Maple Queen, summarized her many activities during her reign and crowned the 1989 Maple Queen and Alternate Maple Queen.

Ted Perdos, PennDER, Bureau of Forestry, brought the maple producers up-to-date on the pear thrip. This is a tiny insect that is a threat to the health of the maple trees by entering the maple tree buds in early April, eating the vegetative part and reducing the vigor of the maple tree.

York County's first June Dairy Month baby was Catherine Louise Anderson, daughter of Terri and Robert Anderson, Dover. Dairy princess Sue Eisenhart, presented the family with a hand-made basket filled with dairy products, cow-motif baby gifts and dairy recipes.

York Dairy Baby Debuts

YORK — Catherine Louise Anderson arrived in the world a winner, by a single minute.

The 7-pound, 3-ounce, dark-haired baby was born at 12:01 a.m. June 1 at the York Hospital, handily taking the honors as York County's June Dairy Month baby. Recognition of the first baby born in June at the county's three hospitals is a Dairy Month salute by the York County Dairy Princess and Promotion Committee.

Newborn Catherine is the first child for Terri and Robert Anderson, Davidsburg Road, Dover. Arriving three days overdue, the 19-1/4-inch infant greeted early June birthday with a healthy, hearty wail, according to her delighted parents.

Hanover Hospital's first June 1 birth was Cody Robert Carr, son of Tammie and Robert Carr, Brodbecks. Born at 1:38 p.m., Cody weighed 6 pounds, 12 ounces, and measured 19-1/2 inches.

Darius Addire Hardesty became Memorial Hospital's June Dairy Month baby when he was born at 1:38 p.m. on June 2. The son of Christina Hardesty, West Princess Street, Darius weighed in at 7 pounds, 9-1/4 ounces and measured 19-1/4 inches.

"A lot of the people involved didn't know June was dairy month," noted York dairy princess Sue Eisenhart. "So it's made a lot more people aware of that."

She presented each family of the June Dairy Month babies hand-made baskets filled with dairy commodities and baby gifts decorated with cow and farm motifs.

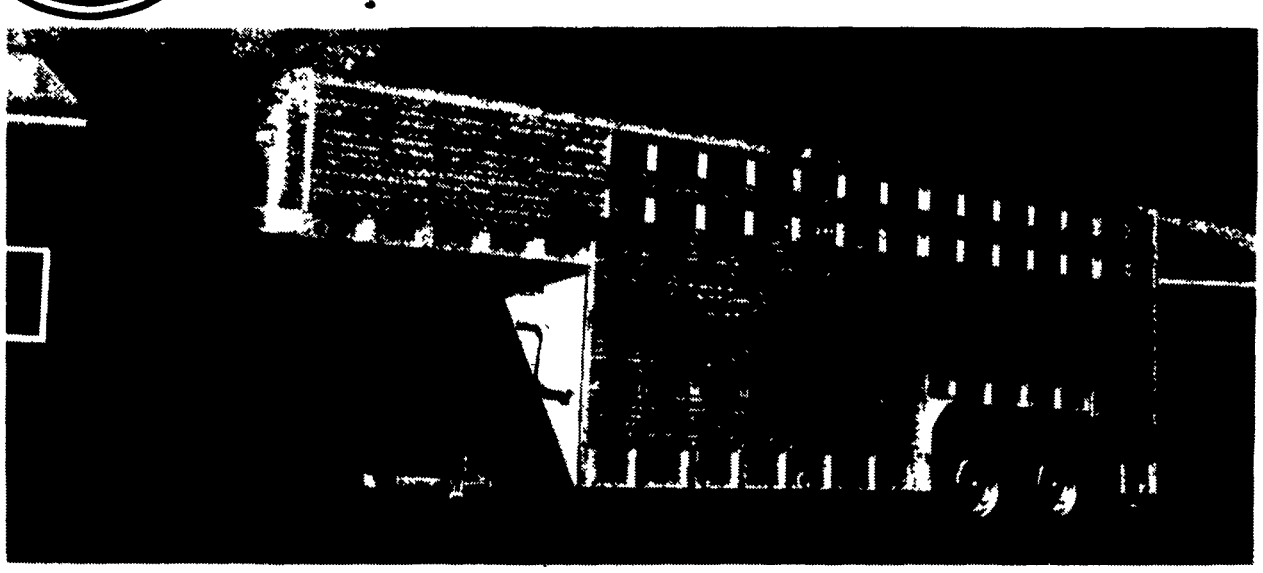
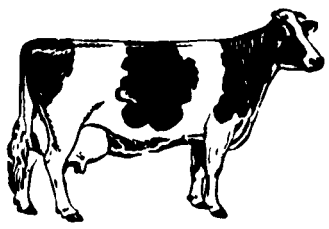
ALUMINUM GOOSENECK TRAILERS



20' Gooseneck Trailer



We Salute The Dairy Farm Families, A Vital Part Of Our Business

A versatile, lightweight, Eby aluminum stock trailer is built to provide years of maintenance free service. An Eby trailer is custom built to fit your individual hauling needs - No mass production! We use only quality components and strong alloy aluminum to manufacture what may be the last trailer you'll ever buy.

- LIGHTWEIGHT - Eby stock trailers are 25-35% lighter than comparable steel trailers. Less weight means better fuel mileage or increased payload.
- MAINTENANCE - Eby aluminum trailers won't rust. Welding and painting can cost you dollars in down time and repairs.
- DURABILITY - Eby trailers are built tough. Quality components and 6061 alloy aluminum provide the ruggedness required in a livestock trailer.

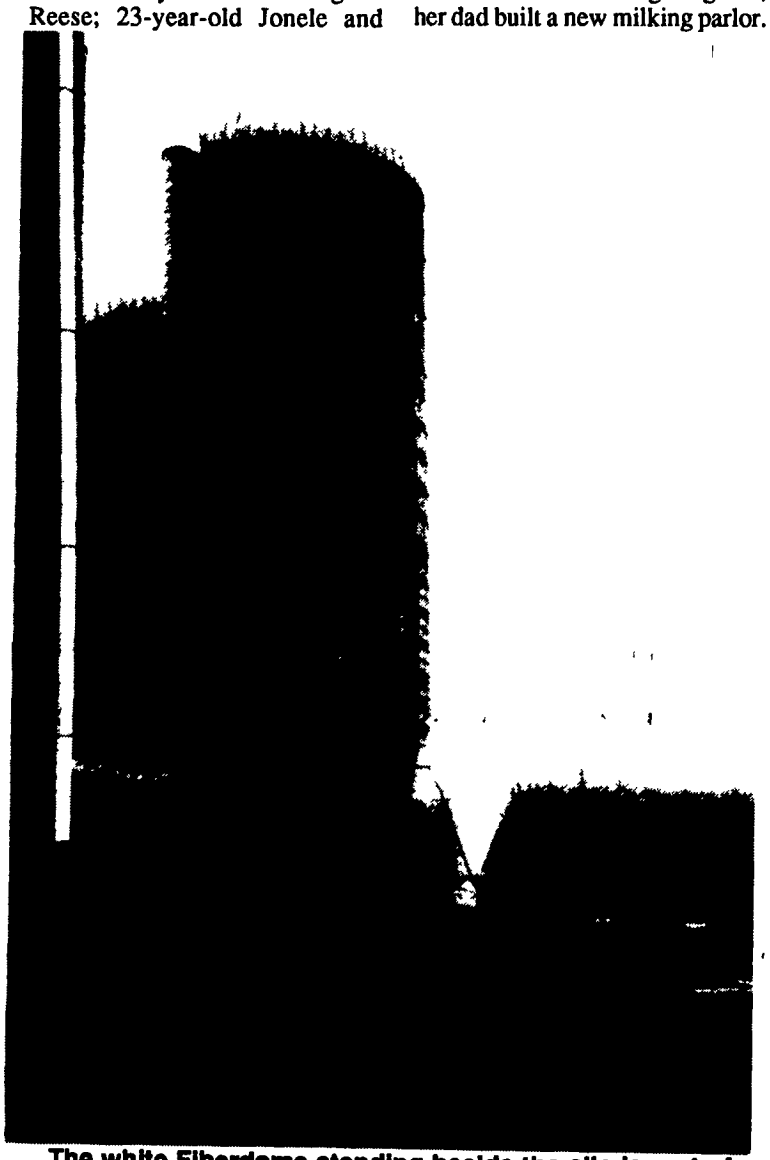
MEADVILLE (Crawford) — A typical Saturday morning at 10 a.m. might find Jonele Reese, chores done for the morning, studying her herd's latest DHIA records at the kitchen table. As herd manager for her dad's dairy operation, Jonele gives her undivided attention to increasing the excellence of their 101 cows: one third Holstein, one fifth Brown Swiss and the balance grade Holstein.

The Crawford farm is a fifth-generation century farm, established in 1851. The original homestead is home to the present Reese family: Jon and Margaret Reese; 23-year-old Jonele and 22-year-old David, both of whom work on the dairy farm; 18-year-old Julie, who attends Gallaudet, a model secondary school for the deaf in Washington, D.C.; and 8-year-old Jill.

Although Jonele remembers accompanying her parents to the barn during chore time, she was not too involved in the family dairy operation until seventh grade when she got a Brown Swiss 4-H calf. She liked working with her calf so much that she began taking care of all the calves until their weaning age. The asthma and hay fever that had previously troubled her were forgotten when she discovered how much she enjoyed the calves.

When she was in eighth grade, her dad built a new milking parlor.

Jonele, herd manager, stands at the northeast corner of the family farm overlooking the main milking barn. The Reese farm earned Dairy of Distinction in 1988.



The white Fiberdome standing beside the silo is part of the total-mixed-ration system Jonele now uses in her feeding program. The system weighs everything and cuts waste.

The cows could sleep and lay down in free stalls and were brought into the double-four herringbone-style milking parlor for twice-a-day milking. As Jonele grew, so did her love for the cows. All she thought about was going to college, studying more about them and improving the herd. Not wishing to put any pressure on his daughter, Jonele's dad encouraged her to diversify and go for an Ag Business Management major. She tried that for her first semester, but Jonele felt that she was missing out. What she really wanted was more on the dairy production side of things. She refuses to be discouraged by the "iffy" nature of dairying. Said Jonele, "There has got to be a transition with the milk supply." She didn't feel the need to graduate into a $32,000 per year job. She said, "I thought I would be happy at it (dairy farming) and, if happy, could make enough to live on."

At Penn State Jonele noticed that many dairy science majors, without a place to go home to, were moving and switching every couple of years. She knew that her dad would welcome any of his children into the operation, but he wanted them to be sure that's what they wanted to do. There was no doubt in Jonele's mind that, after graduation, before she went anywhere else, she really wanted to come home and make things work there. She was fueled by a desire to use her knowledge to make something of what her dad had worked so hard for.

It was quite a transition from dad making all the decisions to Jonele instituting changes that she had learned at school. But dad was up for the challenge and Jonele says the transition "went real well." She came on the scene mid-May, two years ago, just as the family was immersed in preparations to host Crawford County Farm-City Day. Her biggest transition was having to get up at 4:00 a.m. each morning, instead of just on weekends. Said Jonele, "It's hard to get out of bed at 4:00 a.m. if they're not your cows!" Jonele still found it hard. Dad's advice -- "Have another cup of coffee."

The first big change she instituted, in October of 1987, was the way they fed the cows. To produce less stress on their digestive systems, Jonele began to experiment in total mixed ration and changed the feed they got in the milking parlor. She fed top dress to high producers (above 50 lbs.), consisting of two major distiller's grains and megalac.

In addition, they were fed their former parlor feed of corn and raw soybeans mixed into silage, available all day long. These changes did not involve a lot of money and, in about a year on the new feeding program, they began to see an increase in production. They also went on DHIA testing in October, 1987, and, in September of 1988, bought a TMR mixer for mixing feed. The TMR weighs everything and cuts waste.

Jonele breeds the herd artificially, using various suppliers that she chooses by looking at popular farm magazines and advertisements. In addition, she uses the Holstein Association's Red Book, studying bull characteristics from the graphs and linear summaries. Jonele also pays attention to the popular sires at shows. Should they ever want to sell the cows, she wants them to be sired by popular bulls.

On the Reese operation, they raise their own replacements on a property about a mile from the main farm, Jonele's "soon-to-be house." Jonele met her fiance, Bud Kinkade of Hydetown, last year when he drove a feedmill truck to custom-spray their crops. Today they work together on the Reese farm.

Everybody pulls together. Jon coordinates the operation, works with the crops and functions as "relief milker," milking until 6:00 a.m. when Bud gets to work. Margaret helps out with care of the calves. David, who studied agronomy at Penn State, does no milking, but attends to crops, machinery and does all feeding.

Jonele is herd manager or "Barn Boss." Says Jonele, "I'm most useful in the barn; I create havoc on a tractor." She thinks the biggest difference she has made is that the herd managament is now "intensively more specific." She is free to concentrate more on the cows and knows immediately if a cow is not feeling good. "They're getting more attention and I think it's paying off."

Jonele is dedicated and enthusiastic about her time in the barn, even though she realizes that she

Jonele checks over her dry cows. She keeps close tabs on her cows and the extra attention she gives them pays off.

Keystone Farm Credit, ACA Scholarship Winner Named

SHOEMAKERSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Henry J. Wojton has been selected as the recipient of Keystone Farm Credit, ACA's 1989 scholarship award.

A senior at St. Pius X High School in Pottstown, Henry is the son of Henry and Ann Wojton of Collegeville; he will enter the University of Delaware to major in ornamental horticulture.

Applicants for the scholarship must be a high school senior, live in the Keystone Farm Credit, ACA territory, and plan to major in a field of agriculture or agribusiness at a four-year college on a full-time basis. Henry was selected from many qualified applicants.

Ranked in the top 3 percent of his class, Henry also played football and baseball for Pius X and was selected to the First Team All League and the All Area Football Team. He has been an honor student for the past four years, is listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students" for both 1987 and 1988, and he received a National Science Merit Award in 1987 and 1988.

In addition to his scholastic achievements, Henry has been a 4-H member for nine years, and was named Outstanding 4-H Boy in Montgomery County. He also was a Keystone Winner in Forestry, was a leader at Penn State 4-H week and attended the National 4-H Congress in Chicago.

Also involved in community service, Henry has worked as a volunteer at a state hospital, the county geriatric home and a mentally handicapped center. Keystone Farm Credit, ACA serves approximately 5000 members of the agricultural community in the 15 county southeastern Pennsylvania area with financial products and services. It also provides mortgages for rural properties.

won't see the results of what she does today in sire selection for two years. Since taking over the herd, Jonele says that milk production is up, the milk quality is up due to better udder health (somatic cell count decreased from 300,000 to 150,000). The genetic base of the herd is also improved.

When they marry, Bud and Jonele have elected to stay with the Reese operation. She'll keep managing the cows, trying to keep feed costs low by feeding what they grow. She uses genetics to make the cow as efficient as possible and advocates feed changes to increase her potential. What it all boils down to, according to Jonele, is not striving for the best DHIA average, but striving to increase the amount of income over feed costs. Some additional changes Jonele plans for the future are: changing to high moisture corn and saving labor with automatic takeoffs in the milking parlor.

Meanwhile, in a bit of deja vu, 8-year-old Jill has begun raising her first 4-H calf. She speaks of following her sister Jonele's footsteps for a degree in dairy science from Penn State.

Think Cool

The sunshine and higher temperatures we've been experiencing recently are a welcome reprieve from the cool, wet conditions that prevailed earlier. They enable us to get back into the fields again, but they also remind us that summer is around the corner, and that quickly brings back memories of the hot, dry summer of 1988.

Prolonged periods of high temperatures and hot nights can be devastating on cows' appetites, and on their milk production, fat tests and conception rates. If cows crowd under their favorite trees or in other shady areas, and turn them into a sloppy mess, coliform mastitis can become an additional problem.

That's enough of the unpleasant memories. Let us focus instead on some of the things we can do to help prevent these costly problems. Most of the alternatives make use of: shade, air movement and air exchange, evaporative cooling, a good supply of cool drinking water, plus alterations in feed rations, feeding practices and general herd management. These concepts are discussed in greater detail in several Penn State mimeos, available through your Cooperative Extension office.

Stall Barns

Utilize shade to protect cows from the hot rays of the sun. The shady area should also be breezy, clean and close to a convenient supply of feed and water.

A well-ventilated barn can meet all of these requirements, plus it already has a built-in manure handling system. The challenge with barns is to convert them into a breezy, summer shade structure by removing side wall restrictions and by opening up the roof ridge or ceiling so hot air can escape.

Needless to say, stall barns present some challenges, especially if they are two-story bank barns with lean-to additions attached to them. Some farmers have removed barn floor boards so hot air can escape from the stable. You can remove two-foot wide sections, and put them on hinges so they can be easily closed when you want to drive onto the barn floor. Or, you can remove every other board to make a cattle-guard-like floor that can be driven over. When you do this, be safety-minded; prevent people from accidentally falling through the opening.

Fans may be needed to help create a breeze over the cows, to prevent pockets of dead air and to help inject fresh air or exhaust stale air. One 24-inch circulating fan suspended from the ceiling and located so it blows air over the head and shoulder region of the cows, may be needed for every 8-10 stalls. Fans located in the walkway will not provide as much air movement around the cows' heads. In totally enclosed barns, exhaust fans should remove about 500 cfm of air per thousand pounds of body weight. If the air inlets are properly installed and adjusted, they should direct fresh air to the heads of the cows.

Free Stall Setups

One way to get air into free stall barns is to completely open up the side walls, down to, or near ground level, so cows can get the benefit of breezes while lying down in their stalls — while they are comfortably chewing their cuds and making milk. This may require the complete removal of the barn siding or converting the siding into hinged vents. Some dairymen may prefer to replace present siding with curtain walls.

Equally important is to open up the ridge so hot air can escape freely; two inches of unrestricted opening are needed for each ten feet of building width. It is also helpful to have 10- to 12-foot height at the eaves, and to avoid relatively flat roofs and obstructions that restrict air movement. Use light-colored heat-reflective materials in the roof and avoid light panels. The use of insulation, if it can be bird-proofed, will help, but the cost may be hard to justify.

Don't forget the holding area! First of all, minimize the amount of time cows have to stand in the holding air. If possible, remove side walls and open the peak. Use fans to blow lots of air over the cows; these may be the same fans that exhaust air from the parlor.

Feeding Areas

Minimize the distance cows have to walk to feed and water — at the barn and in the pasture. The feeding area should also be shaded and breezy. A roof over the bunk area can provide some shade. Meshed materials stretched and supported between the bunk and barns or fence lines can provide additional relief from the sun. Construct bunk roofs high enough to accommodate fans. If a double-sloped roof is used, it could serve as an air duct with fans installed in the gable ends; slots cut in the bottom of the duct could direct air onto the shoulder area of cows on either side of the bunk.

Evaporative Cooling

We are hearing more and more about evaporative cooling. How does it work? For a first-hand experience, try wetting your finger while staying out of the breeze; now blow on your finger and feel the difference. That's the cooling effect we're trying to get on cows.

To accomplish this, we have to soak cows to the hide, without using excessive amounts of water and creating a sloppy mess and mastitis problems; a little water dripping from the cows' flanks is no problem, but prevent it from dripping off the udder. Then, we have to place the wet cow in a breeze and allow her to dry off. The drying off process is the cooling process. This is accomplished by sprinkling — not misting — the cow for about 2-5 minutes and then allowing her to stand in a breeze for about 10-15 minutes.

A good place to install a sprinkling system is at the feed bunk, about 32 inches back from the bunk so that water is directed onto the center of cows' backs and far enough from the bunk to prevent feed from becoming wet. Fans should also be installed at the bunk to help cool cows and increase dry matter intakes.

A sprinkler system can be constructed by using a ¾ to 1 inch rigid schedule 40 PVC or galvanized pipe suspended 8 feet above alley level. Small fan jet type nozzles (tee jet 800067 have been used by some farmers) are located on the pipe at 4- to 5-foot intervals.

A solenoid valve, timer and thermostat provide automatic operation. Thermostats can be set at about 78 degrees F. A globe valve can help control water flob. Sand filters and periodic flushing of the lines with chlorine can help prevent nozzles from plugging.

Avoid using misters; fans and breezes can blow the mist away from the cows. More importantly, the mist is less likely to penetrate the hair coat and soak the hide. If the mist just stays on the hair, the cow may actually be more uncomfortable; she'll feel like she's in a steam bath.

Misting cows and evaporating moisture inside a barn can have some drawbacks, too. Humidity levels can increase considerably, and the barn can become quite wet. Temperatures in the barn may be cooler, but the discomfort of higher humidity may offset the benefits of a cooler temperature. A wetter barn may also make the job of preventing mastitis more of a challenge. These problems may be reduced if air exchange in the barn is great enough to prevent a build-up of humidity.

Another form of evaporation is to spray water on the barn roof, perhaps by using a garden sprinkler hose. It can keep the roof cooler. Spouting will help prevent sloppy conditions around the barn.

Recently, you may have been reading how southern dairymen use cooling ponds to help keep cows cool. One important thing to remember is they are using large amounts of fresh, clean water. That's a lot different from letting cows wade in ponds where there is little exchange of water. Unless the water is very clean, this practice could increase udder infections.

As you focus on keeping cows comfortable this summer, don't forget the dry cows and springing heifers. It's important for them to get off to a good start.

In this article, we focused on some engineering concepts for keeping cows more comfortable in summer. Feeding and management of the herd are also important, but that'll have to be the subject of another article.

PDCA Judging School

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Purebred Dairy Cattle Association will hold their annual Judging School in Bradford County on July 11-12. All major dairy breeds will be judged during the two day school. All classes will be held at the Troy Fairgrounds with cattle supplied by some of the top breeders in Bradford County.

Paul King, nationally-known judge and Holstein breeder, has accepted the invitation to officiate at this year's school.

The Pennsylvania PDCA school is open to any Pennsylvania interested in learning to judge dairy cows. Judges can also work toward Purebred Dairy Cattle Judging approval status.

Anyone interested in attending this year's school should contact Ken Raney, Secretary of the Pennsylvania PDCA, at 839 Benner Pike, State College, PA 16801 - 814-234-0364.

School information will be forwarded to those who request it by June 14, 1989.

Kutztown Folk Festival

Mama pig and her piglets will be just one of the featured animals at the expanded Farm Animal Tent at this summer's 40th annual Folk Festival in Kutztown on July 1 through July 9. Other activities will include the Country Auction, hymn singing at the Old Oley Union Church, 1,500 hand-made quilts on display and for sale, more than 200 of the country's finest craftsmen, and lots of delicious Pennsylvania Dutch food.

American Barnyard In For Changes In 21st Century

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Cows that fill the American barnyard of the 21st century may not look very different from today's herds, but they could carry genes that give them natural resistance to disease.

At the same time, the next century may see other animal innovations such as chickens living in a closed, disease-free environment, and steers eating crop residues and fibrous plants that, while poorly digested now, by then will have been converted into nutritious feed to support high levels of animal production.

These are predictions from U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists on possible changes in U.S. animal production in the next 25 to 50 years.

"Of course, there are no ironclad guarantees that what the scientists envisioned will become reality," said R. Dean Plowman, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Research Service. "But based on the research they're involved in right now, it's certainly within the realm of probability."

A report on the scientists' predictions appears in the new issue of Agricultural Research magazine. Additional details on the researchers' predictions will appear in the magazine's next issue.

One of the more intriguing prospects is a computerized listing of genetic codes for producing livestock with specific attributes such as disease resistance.

"There are only four letters in the genetic alphabet -- A, T, C and G -- for four molecules," explained Robert J. Wall, an animal physiologist at ARS' Reproduction Laboratory at Beltsville. "Depending on their sequence, say, ATCCGATCCG, and how long that sequence is, that's the recipe for that gene.

Wall said researchers already have the chemicals represented by A, T, C and G, and also have a machine that can recreate the desired genes. The missing ingredients at this point are the codes themselves.

"We can read the alphabet of specific genes, although only in the last 10 years have we been able to do this with genes from higher organisms," Wall said.

"We know the words, but we don't know the syntax of the sentences," he added. "There may be 100 genes involved in eye color. We have to learn not just what they are, but how they work together."

Other possible developments predicted by scientists include:

— Broilers grown in a closed environment with filtered air and fed a pasteurized and semi-liquid diet. The closed setting would eliminate infectious diseases in the flock and would boost animal efficiency since all of the feed eaten by the birds could be used by their bodies for growth instead of some of it being needed for warmth. In addition, the semi-liquid diet would be easier for the birds to digest, according to James W. Deaton, an animal scientist at ARS' South Central Poultry Research Laboratory at Mississippi State, Miss.

— Steers efficiently using forages and other fibrous feedstuffs. Robert R. Oltjen said researchers may find a microorganism that can break down lignin, the binder for woody fibers, or perhaps even borrow a gene from termites and insert it in a microbe that already lives in the rumen of cattle. Oltjen is associate deputy administrator for animal and postharvest sciences on ARS' National Program Staff in Beltsville.

— Breeder hens producing double their current rate of 140 chicks per year as the poultry industry swings to artificial insemination, Deaton predicted. He also said the industry may use dwarf breeder hens to lower feed costs.

"These advances all could contribute to a more plentiful supply of beef and poultry for American consumers," Plowman noted. "And lower production costs might be translated into lower prices at the grocery store."

For Spring Haylage Season With The Economy Way Of Crop Harvesting

RICHARDTON

A GREAT CONCEPT JUST GOT BETTER!

Richardton Mfg. Company Introduces The
MODEL 700 MULTI-PURPOSE DUMP WAGON

Many area farmers are quickly realizing the potential danger and liability of transporting forage with conventional tractor-drawn wagons. Consider the RICHARDTON Dump Wagon/farm truck approach.

* Increased speed from field to barn
* Brakes, turning signals, lights provide increased traffic safety
* Equipment cost/amt. of forage handled is less than conventional systems

Replace three or more forage boxes with one RICHARDTON Dump

MULTI-PURPOSE DUMP WAGON

BIG, STRONG, ECONOMICAL

• Works For You • All Year Long • Wet Field Conditions • Variety of Crops

The Most Versatile High Dump Wagon

Thousands of farmers can't be wrong. Many farmers still operate the Richardton High Dump Wagon they bought nearly 15 years ago. They say they'll buy a new one if the old one wears out. Other farmers own two or three Richardton Wagons and use them crop after crop, season after season. Ask the man who owns one.

You May Think They Are Higher Priced Than Forage Boxes — But You May Be Surprised!

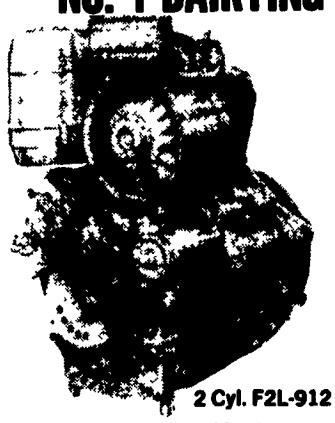
NO. 1 DAIRYING DIESEL



2 Cyl. F2L-912

KHD DEUTZ

Since 1968 F2L-912 diesels have earned the reputation as the most reliable diesel. Don't settle for less.

EASIER STARTING: Heavy flywheel provides easy starting. No electric heater plugs.

QUIETER: Runs quieter than most water cooled diesels. Very quiet exhaust.

Continuous Duty Rating:
26.5 HP @ 1800 RPM

Fewer repair parts than comparable three-cylinder diesels - cheaper to overhaul.

It has direct injection, lube oil cooling, and oil cooled pistons. This engine has proven to survive the extreme heat of a heavy load in a small engine house better than any other engine.

HOOBER ...THE AXIAL-FLOW SPECIALISTS

Case IH Axial-Flow Combine

DIFFERENT and BETTER from the inside out

HERE'S THE INSIDE DIFFERENCE:

1. An impeller on the front of the rotor draws the crop and air into the rotor and threshing cage.
2. The single rotor threshes and separates the crop. Speed of rotation can be adjusted on the go.
3. Torque-sensing rotor drive automatically regulates belt tension in relation to load.
4. Three-section concaves can be removed and reinstalled by one man in less than 30 minutes. Small-wire and large-wire concaves are available to match different crops. Clearance is easily adjusted with a ratchet handle.
5. A variety of separating grates are available to best handle almost any crop you'll be harvesting.
6. Augers move the grain smoothly, positively to the cleaning sieves. Grain can't bunch up, even on steep hillsides.
7. Opposed-action adjustable sieves remove chaff from the grain.
8. Advanced-design cleaning fan with variable speed drive removes any chaff and foreign material that remains.
9. Positive discharge beater propels straw rearward to the straw spreaders. (Straw chopper is optional.)
10. Wide spread twin-rotor straw spreaders distribute discharge material uniformly and can be removed in seconds for windrowing material.

Why Axial-Flow is superior. On conventional combines, the grain passes between the cylinder and concave only once. Consequently, the threshing action is severe. But with Axial-Flow, grain is threshed several times — repeatedly, but gently — as it spirals around the single, large diameter rotor and passes through the threshing cage. Multiple threshing plus gentle threshing results in less cracked grain, less dockage at the elevator and top price for every bushel.

Centrifugal force replaces straw walkers. Axial-Flow eliminates the need for straw walkers — a substantial source of grain loss with conventional combines. Consequently, the more grain you grow, the more grain you'll save with the more efficient Axial-Flow system.

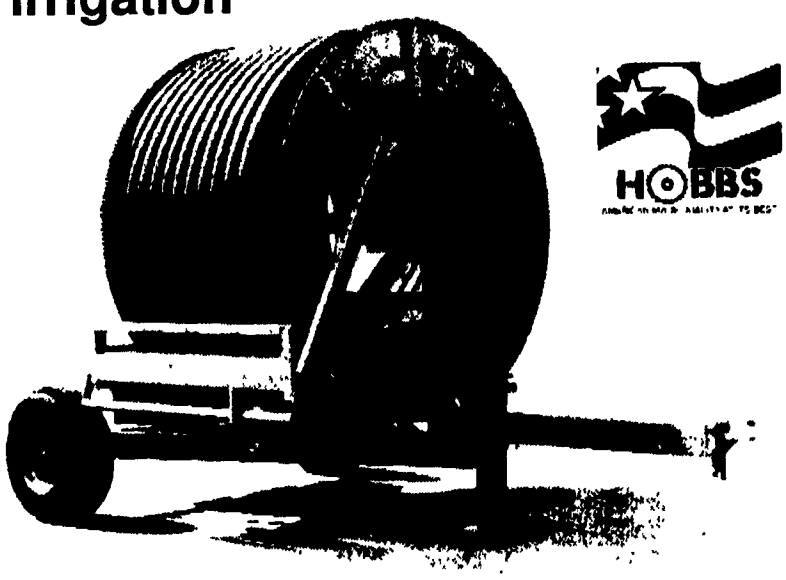
Reel Rain, American Made Quality Irrigation



Imitated but not duplicated. Many imports are copying the proven design of Hobbs Reel Rain Irrigation systems. What they can't copy is the years of experience that have gone into perfecting the Reel Rain design. Today's Reel Rain systems are the best ever. They're stronger, simpler to operate, and more dependable. We offer fourteen models from which to choose depending on the number of acres you intend to irrigate. With the optional engine drive each unit becomes a cost effective solution to removing liquid manure from your holding ponds and lagoons.

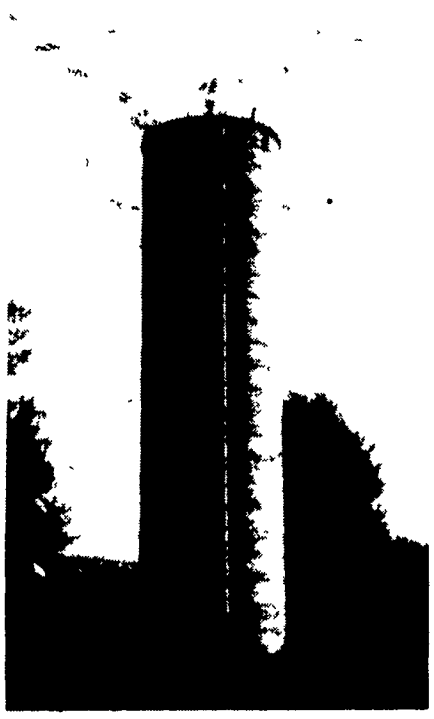
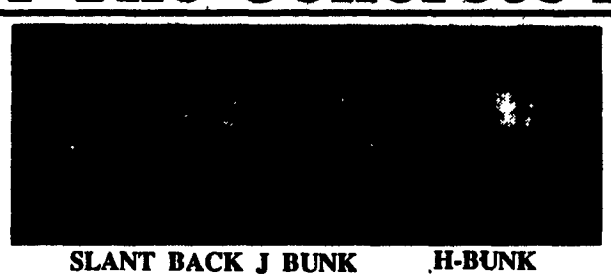
WE CUSTOM DESIGN SYSTEMS FOR YOU

"Consider The Concrete Advantages"



The best storage system for high moisture cob corn is a poured concrete SOLLENBERGER SILO, with bottom unloading. The feed can be safely stored at less than 30% moisture, air is effectively excluded limiting mold growth, the silo is equipped with a distributor to keep separation to a minimum which means more efficient unloading and consistent ration. The 6" solid concrete wall reflects heat meaning that heat damage is minimized and feed is kept cooler. Now Is "Decision Time". Make Plans Now To Have Your Sollenberger Silo Erected In Time To Store Your High Moisture Ground Ear Corn.



SLANT BACK J BUNK H-BUNK

Let Us Know Your Needs. We Can Deliver From Our Large Inventory And Set On Your Prepared Site. OR: We Can Load On Your Truck To Help Save On Freight Costs. We Have Several Sizes And Styles To Choose From, Plus Metal Posts, For Cable, Which Can Be Bolted To The Bunk To Keep Cattle Out.

MANURE STORAGE SYSTEMS

- Manure Storage Systems For The Small Herd - or The 400 Cow Herds And Larger.
- Systems Adaptable To Any Type Equipment
- SCS Approved
- Circular Tanks Poured-In-Place Above Ground - In Ground - Or Uneven Backfill.
- Pre-Cast Concrete panels Delivered And Set On Your Prepared Site.

CONSIDER THE ADVANTAGES OF HIGH MOISTURE EAR CORN

Farmers who use ground shelled corn rather than ground ear corn when putting up high moisture corn (HMC) are not only leaving the cob in the field, but they are leaving at least $150. worth of milk per acre of corn in the field.

These remarks were made by Dr. Howard Larson, noted Mid-Western dairy nutritionist and management specialist.

Further comments based upon years of research included:

* Any amount of cob is better than none.
* It is not economically feasible nor best for the cow to feed high moisture shelled corn.
* It is not necessary to feed hay to dairy cows.

When cob is included with the grian, you not only get an extra 10 to 12 percent HMC by weight, but you get better digestibility in your cows. By adding the cob to the ration, you keep a floor of fiber under the total ration and fiber can supply a lot of energy; and you get better rumen action.

Polled Hereford Gold Trophy Achievers Honored

KANSAS CITY, MO — Gold was the goal achieved for the 22 Polled Hereford cows whose sons and daughters earned them Gold Trophy Dam recognition. The Gold Trophy program is sponsored by the American Polled Hereford Association and is designed to recognize Polled Hereford bulls and cows whose progeny excel in show-ring competition. Points are awarded at the breed's annual National Show and at designated Standard of Perfection (SOP) Shows at major livestock expositions across the U.S.

CB2 445 Dream Girl became the first cow to attain cow to attain the Gold Trophy-Plus recognition level. This award is given to sires and dams of top-placing cow-calf pairs at the National and SOP Shows. She qualified for the Gold Trophy Dam award two years ago and is owned by Hawley Polled Hereford Ranch, Cottage Grove, Ore.

While no new bulls were added to the Gold Trophy list, three bulls made significant gains to move them up in the overall rankings. TOP MUS Knight Ryder netted 1,246 SOP points this year for a total of 1,482, vaulting him from 48th spot to fourth place in the rankings. He is owned by Michigan State University, East Lansing; ICS Farms, Williamstown, Vt.; and Ponderosa Ranch Ltd., Lloydminster, Sask.

Ihry GK Race netted a strong 586 SOP points during the year to jump from 36th to 11th place with an overall total of 896 points. His owners include Tom Ihry, Hope, N.D.; Glenkirk Farms, Maysville, Mo.; and Candy Meadow Farms, Lexington, Tenn.

FCF Magic 433 made the third largest gain of 310 new points, moving him from 43rd to 22nd in the rankings. He's owned by ACE Land & Cattle Co., Millbrook, N.Y.; MCS Polled Herefords, Elgin, Okla; Apple Creek-Empire Farm, Sharon, Conn.; Briar Hill Farms, Millbrook, Ont.; Four Corners Farm, Everett, Mass.; Flicek Farms, Neilburg, Sask.; and Archie Albright, New York, N.Y.

Junior Livestock Field Day Planned

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Several hundred 4-H'ers and FFA members will bring their sheep, beef cattle, and swine to Penn State on June 17 for the annual Junior Livestock Field Day.

The event, which combines education and competition, has been sponsored on campus by the College of Agriculture's department of dairy and animal science for more than 15 years.

The day's activities are open to members of 4-H clubs and FFA chapters from across the state. "It is not uncommon for counties to charter buses and bring entire groups of students," said Dr. James Gallagher, professor of animal science and coordinator of the day's activities.

After 8:30 a.m. registration, youth will gather at the Ag Arena to judge beef, sheep, swine, and meats classes. In the afternoon, participants will attend educational programs.

The sheep program includes shepherd's contests and instruction in showmanship and handling. The swine program concentrates on selecting, caring for, fitting, and showing 4-H pigs. There will be lots of helpful tips and demonstrations.

In the beef program, youth will learn what a "choice steer" really means. A discussion of quality grading will include fat content and eating quality. Participants will "guess the grade" from cooked samples.

There will be a showmanship contest in the afternoon. Participants should bring a show stick and comb.

Why Wash Eggs?

With rare exceptions, as the egg enters the world it is free of microorganisms that are harmful to humans. But from this point on, there are many opportunities for harmful (pathogenic) microorganisms to enter the egg.

The change from the hen's body temperature of 106 degrees Fahrenheit to an ambient temperature of 45-90 degrees Fahrenheit (usually 65-75) causes the egg contents to contract compared to the stationary eggshell. This action causes the inner and outer shell membranes to separate at the weakest point, thus producing the air cell, usually at the large end.

The same vacuum-type action that makes the air cell can also bring in microorganisms from the surface through the pores of the shell. The eggshell has 6,000-8,000 pores which are designed to allow air exchange for the developing embryo, but may also serve as avenues of entry for microorganisms that might be on the shell. This transfer of microorganisms onto or through the shell can happen at the time of laying (oviposition) or during handling or washing.

The shell is the first line of defense against harmful microorganisms, the outer and inner shell membranes are next, then different agents inside the egg, such as conalbumin and lysozyme. The effectiveness of these defenses depends on the number of harmful microorganisms that are present to challenge them, and whether or not these bacteria or molds are able to move by themselves.

Improper egg handling can help these microorganisms enter the egg. For example, wide temperature changes can make the eggs sweat (water condenses on the shell), or even to crack. A thermal crack, or any other type of crack in the shell will allow easier access of microorganisms to the highly nutritious egg contents.

When eggs are properly washed and sanitized, manure and other dirt is removed from the shell. This reduces the number of microorganisms on the shell, and thus gives the natural defenses of the egg more of a chance to keep out any invaders. Contamination of eggs by manure is generally less of a problem with hens kept in cages than those in litter houses or on the open range.

There are many components in the seemingly simple process of washing an egg. All of these parts interact to produce a wholesome, nutritious product that has a long shelf life.

The above information is part of a Mid-Atlantic Cooperative Extension (MACE) publication. The publication will probably be available for distribution sometime during mid- to late summer this year. Since we are heading into summer, it becomes more important to maintain egg sanitation procedures in order to prevent bacterial contamination, particularly Salmonella.

In subsequent articles, practices and procedures for washing commercial eggs, as well as egg cleaning procedures for smaller on-farm operations, will be discussed.

Raise Guard Dogs With Sheep

SCHAUMBURG, IL — Guard dogs raised with sheep are making a significant contribution to increased production by protecting flocks from attacks by vicious predators on remote ranges, according to a report made to the Public Relations Council of the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA).

Dogs are commonly trained to run cattle herds in the vast remote ranges of northern California, according to Leslie R. Douglas, D.V.M., of Arcata, Calif., and the use of guard dogs with sheep is an ancient practice. However, until recently it was very unusual to use dogs in the U.S. to protect sheep flocks from predators. Attacks on sheep by coyotes, bob cats, mountain lions and bears in the wild country are common, but these predators rarely attack cattle.

"Several of my clients are training dogs to protect their sheep flocks," Douglas said. "These dogs are raised with the sheep until they begin to think they're sheep, not dogs, and they will only kill predators. They know the difference between a sheep and a coyote."

One of the ranchers who has a trained guard dog, Dina Moore of Kneeland, Calif. says losses to predators have stopped since a 100-pound Anatolian shepherd dog joined the sheep flock a year ago. The Anatolian breed is one of several now being used to guard U.S. sheep flocks. Before training the dog, the Moores had almost given up hope of being able to keep sheep alive.

The Moore ranch covers 10,000 acres Like many ranchers in the area, the Moores raised only cattle until a few years ago, when they started a sheep flock that now includes 90 head of ewes.

The Moores were attracted by the environmental advantages of sheep raising and the potential economic return, but they soon learned that they could not profi-

Wool Pool Set In Northwestern Pennsylvania

MEADVILLE (Crawford) — Northwestern Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers' Cooperative Association has readied plans for the 1989 Wool Pool to be held Thursday, June 15.

The site will be at the Home Show Building of the Crawford County Fairgrounds located just off Route 77 on the Eastern edge of Meadville. Hours for receiving wool will be 8 a.m. through 3 p.m.

This year's wool crop has been sold to Prouvost, Lefebvre & Co., Inc. for $.7925 per pound for the medium staple grade according to Blaine Schlosser, Crawford County agent of the Pennsylvania State Cooperative Extension.

Any producer with wool to sell is welcome to market it through the Association pool.

Pennsylvania Beef Council Investigating Check-Off Delinquency

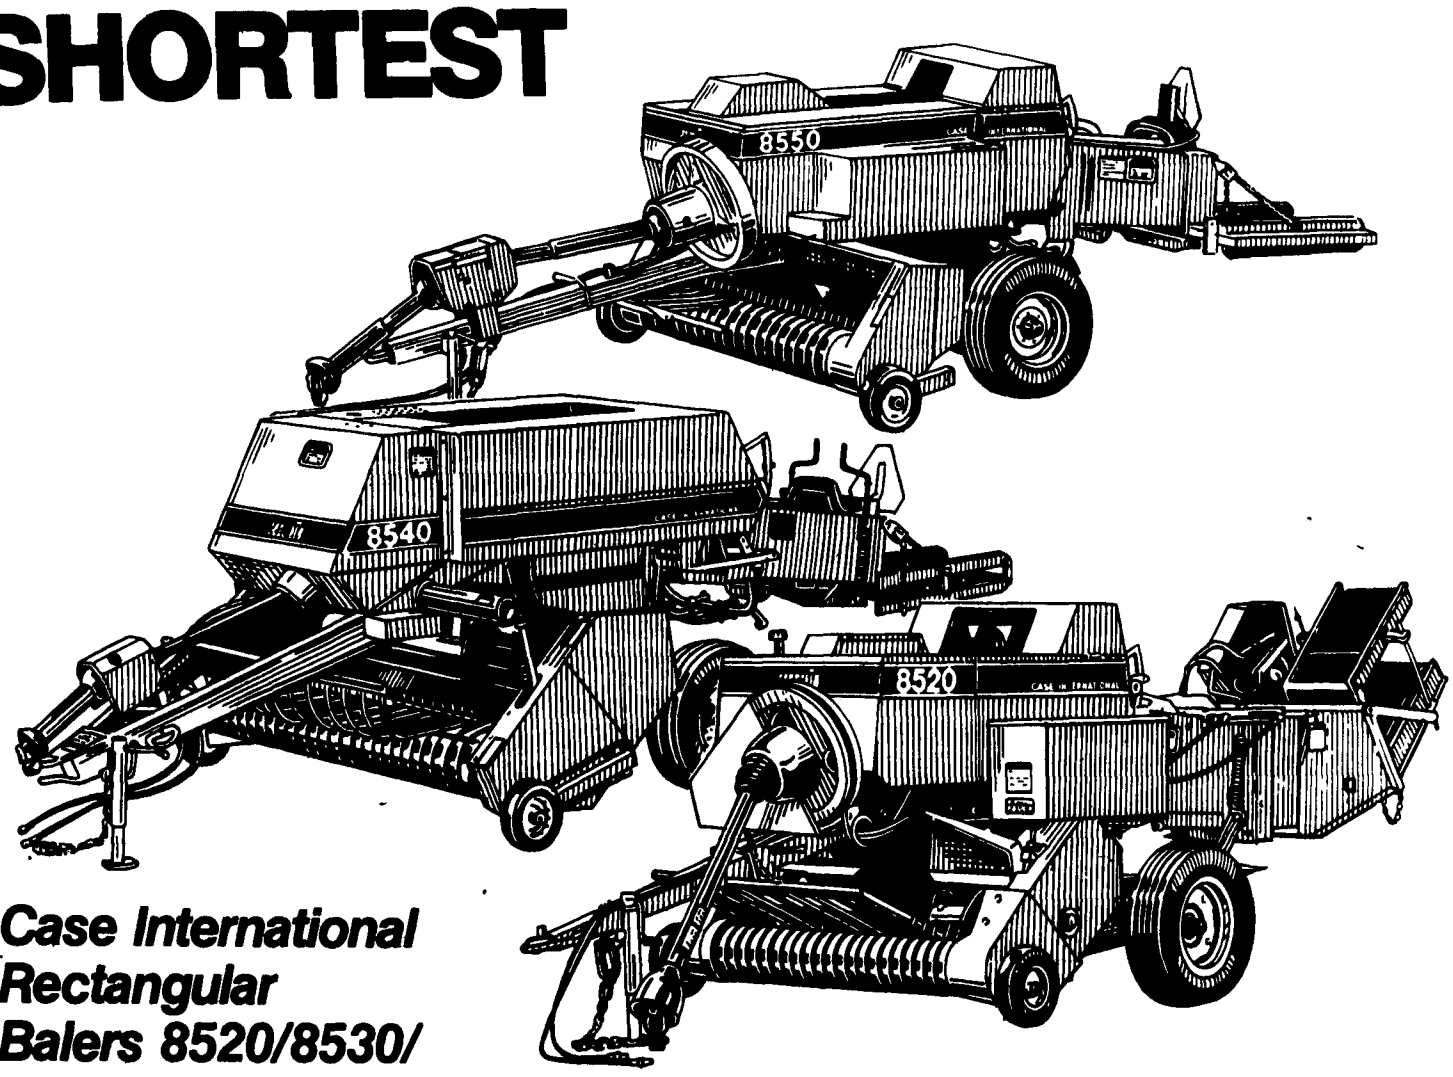
HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Beef Council, in cooperation with the Beef Promotion and Research Board, has implemented an intensive compliance program whereby all registered livestock dealers and packers/processors are currently being investigated relative to their participation in the $1 per head beef checkoff program.

All licensed dealers and packers have, or will shortly, receive a status card to verify their participation in the beef cattle industry. The status cards will then be used by the PBC office to determine whether the dealer or packer is required to participate in the checkoff program. Failure to return or accurately record data on the status cards may result in a penalty, fine, or both.

The Pennsylvania Beef Council, and other state beef councils are working closely with the national compliance manager of the Beef Promotion and Research Board in an effort to gain maximum compliance with the beef checkoff program.

The beef checkoff program is a self-help industry effort designed to increase the demand for beef and veal. Checkoff dollars are invested in consumer promotion, information, education and research programs.

A STRAIGHT LINE IS STILL SHORTEST



Case International Rectangular Balers 8520/8530/ 8540/8550/8580

That's why all five 8500 Series Case IH Rectangular Balers give you center line design. Your hay moves in a straight line from the time it's picked up until it leaves the baler as a tight, uniform bale.

Center line means there are no corners to turn to get crop into the bale chamber as with conventional balers. Nutritious leaves go into the bale, not on the ground. And with the baler directly behind the tractor, it's easy to transport through narrow bridges and gates.

Case IH Rectangular Balers also give you:

- Wide, low-profile pickups collect full, heavy windrows with leaf-saving gentleness because the crop is not lifted as high to get it into the baler
- Prepacker chamber compresses hay into uniform flakes
- Flake size, density and bale size are more uniform
- High-speed, short-stroke plunger to pack bales tighter
- Hydraulic density control (optional on 8540, standard on 8550/8580) to regulate chamber pressure for tighter, square-shouldered bales for easier stacking

Produce tighter, more uniform bales — on schedule.

Milk Radio Commercial Named Best of '88

TOWSON, MD — "Olympics," a comical commercial produced by the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association on the merits of drinking milk, has been selected the Best Radio Commercial for 1988 in Advertising Age's annual competition. Ad Age, the country's premier magazine of the advertising industry, named MAMMA's sport as the winner of the prestigious competition at an Awards Dinner hosted by comedian Jay Leno in Chicago on April 27.

Earlier the same week "Olympics" and a second spot produced by MAMMA called "History," took home the gold at the 1989 District Two American Advertising Federation Addy Awards held in New York. The two spots were recognized as "Best Local Radio Commercial" of more than 30-seconds. The spots were part of a three commercial series that won "Best Local Radio Campaign" in the Addy Competition.

W.B. Doner & Company, Baltimore, created the spots for MAMMA last fall as part of an advertising campaign for milk in the Philadelphia area, in conjunction with Temple basketball. The series is currently getting wider play throughout the region on radio broadcasts of Phillies, Orioles and minor league baseball games. Three more commercials, using the same zany format, are scheduled to break later this summer.

The 60-second "Olympics" spot is a tongue-in-cheek lecture on the value of milk, running from ancient history to modern-day Olympics, to "prove" that milk-drinking countries out-perform the competition. It incorporates MAMMA's long-running campaign slogan, "Milk is fitness you can drink," and reminds listeners to "choose whole, low-fat or skim."

"We are extremely proud to have won such high honors for our commercials," stated MAMMA's Chairman of the Board, Robert McSparran. "Our primary goal is to develop quality advertising programs that will enhance milk sales for our producers. It is very rewarding to have our commercials recognized as the best by the top creative minds in the business."

MAMMA is the dairy farmer funded and directed agency, responsible for promoting milk and dairy products in the Mid-Atlantic through research, education, advertising, merchandising, publicity and public relations.

New Oats Varieties To Be Shown At Landisville Crops Day

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Penn State Crops Day at Landisville will be held June 21 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The event will be held at Penn State's Southeast Field Research Laboratory, two miles northwest of Landisville on Auction Road in Lancaster County.

This year's crops day will feature research and educational programs about small grains and forage crops. There will be displays of recently released grain varieties such as Hercules and Pennuda spring oats and Pennco winter barley.

David Livingston, research agronomist with USDA, and Dr. Marvin Risius, professor of plant breeding at Penn State, will discuss the performance of recently released varieties and will evaluate varieties currently in development.

"We're bringing a new white-seeded variety of oats with a yield that equals of surpasses Ogle oats, the leading variety in Pennsylvania," says Livingston. The new variety will be released in the fall, but growers can see it first at the Crops Day, along with other new lines.

Other topics to be examined at the event include disease and nitrogen management, annual forages, forage insects, alfalfa disease and weed control. "Anyone actively involved in growing, part or full time, will find something of interest at the Crops Day," says Dr. Elwood Hatley, professor of agronomy at Penn State, who will chair the event.

For more information on the Landisville Crops Day, contact Hatley at (814) 863-1013.

Raise Guard Dogs

tably raise sheep until they found a way to protect sheep from predators. They had shot coyotes who preyed upon their sheep but rejected the idea of trying to eradicate predators. The dog provided a way to preserve the ecological balance and save sheep.

The key to success in using a guard dog with sheep is to raise the dog with sheep and establish that the dog needs to be with sheep all the time. The Moore guard dog sleeps, eats and plays with the sheep. The dog is friendly with people, but she is not allowed in the house. Moore, her husband, Mark, and the couple's two children avoid contact that might encourage a pet relationship with the dog.

"Some nights, especially during lambing, we can hear the dog all night long keeping predators away from the sheep," Moore said. The Moore guard dog takes a keen mothering interest in baby lambs. "She really likes those little lambs. She's as much a sheep as a dog will ever be," she added.

Raising sheep with veterinary consultation can provide a promising economic opportunity for livestock producers, according to the AVMA. Sheep can return nearly twice the net profit of cattle, according to Douglas.

For example, Douglas estimated that $3,000 will purchase five cows at $600 that can produce, at best, five calves worth $85 per hundredweight at weaning time. The calves will bring a return of $1,912.50. By comparison, the same $3,000 might be used to purchase 40 ewes at $75 that should produce more than a 125 percent lamb crop. At $70 per hundredweight, this investment would return $3,500, and these calculations do not include one of the principal advantages of sheep raising: sheep produce two crops a year, lambs and wool.

"Sheep raising can be very lucrative for producers willing to do the husbandry that's required," Douglas said. In remote areas like the Moore ranch, that husbandry may include training a dog to guard the sheep.

30 YEARS AGO

-Breaking of eggs at the farm and during marketing costs Pennsylvania egg producers and marketing agencies about two and one-half million dollars per year, reports Werner J. Mueller, poultry researcher at the Pennsylvania State University.

Dr. Mueller and his associates are studying the effect of temperature and humidity on egg shell strength.

These studies have found that hens kept at a constant temperature of 85 degrees Fahrenheit for 8 months produced eggs with thinner shells than hens kept at a constant temperature of 55 degrees F.

Hens housed at 85 degree F. ate 20 per cent less feed and had lower calcium loevels than hens at 55 degrees F.

The Penn State researchers have developed new testing devices for determining shell strength of eggs.

-The U.S. Department of Agriculture today issued a statement defining its general policy on certain current lamb buying practices and how provisions of the Packers and Stockyards Act apply to these practices.

USDA announced that this statement has now been issued as Sec. 203.1 of Chapter II, Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations. It is not issued as a rule or regulation in itself, but is an interpretation that certain praactices are considered unfair under provisions of the P&S Act.

-The Pennsylvania Soil Conservation Commission has released a letter to President Dwight D. Eisenhower urging him to change Bureau of the Budget policies concerning small watershed projects under Public Law 566, the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act, is gaining rapidly. Applications totaling over 600,000 acres have already been received in 1959.

-The annual short course, "Improving the Home Grounds," will be presented at Penn State, July 6-10. This year's course has been designed to concentrate on the latest techniques and materials for those who want to learn how to sold maintenance and other home grounds landscaping problems.

The program should be of special interest to homeowners, garden club members and nurserymen concerned with residential landscaping.

Grange Supports Additional Ag Funding

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania State Grange in conjunction with the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations is recommending additional agricultural budget funding in several areas.

Funding needed for the Department of Agriculture includes monetary support for two veterinary pathologists (an additional $65,000); one full-time large capacity inspector for the Bureau of Weights and Measures ($200,000 per year for five years); an integrated pest management program which would oversee the nutrient management program ($200,000); support for the operation of the newly appointed Animal Health Commission (an additional $100,000); funds for the brucellosis line item to be reinstated ($150,000); and means to finance the purchase of vaccine ($125,000).

Additional funding needed for the Department of Environmental Resources includes: Under the Bureau of Forestry it is recommended that 25 new foresters be hired (a minimum of $890,000). Also, the Pennsylvania Rural Leadership program needs $40,000 in funding to continue this valuable educational opportunity.

A few years ago, the Penn State Ag Extension was granted an additional $5 million. It is recommended that they receive 7 percent instead of 4 percent for each of the line items to cover the normal operating expenses. They also propose that the $9.4 million requested for ag research be broken down to $3.3 million per year for three budget years.

The University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine has a concern for tuition increases. Because of this expense there is attrition of Pennsylvania applicants. It is requested that $250,000 be put aside for a Pennsylvania resident program. Other fundings needed include veterinary instruction ($8,154,000); New Bolton Center ($3,888,000, of which $250,000 is proposed for support of the Comparative Bovine Retrovirus Unit); Food and Animal Clinics ($2,273,000, the majority in support of the New Bolton Center teaching hospital and mammalian pathology diagnostics); and Center for Animal Health and Productivity ($1,316,000).

The final proposal is for Rodale Research Center. The $340,000 requested is for the project of rural/urban interface in agriculture; this funding does not reflect the needs of the overall agricultural effort at Penn State University.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, which represents 42,000 farm and rural Pennsylvanians, joins the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations to request that these agricultural funding needs be fulfilled for the betterment of Pennsylvania agriculture.

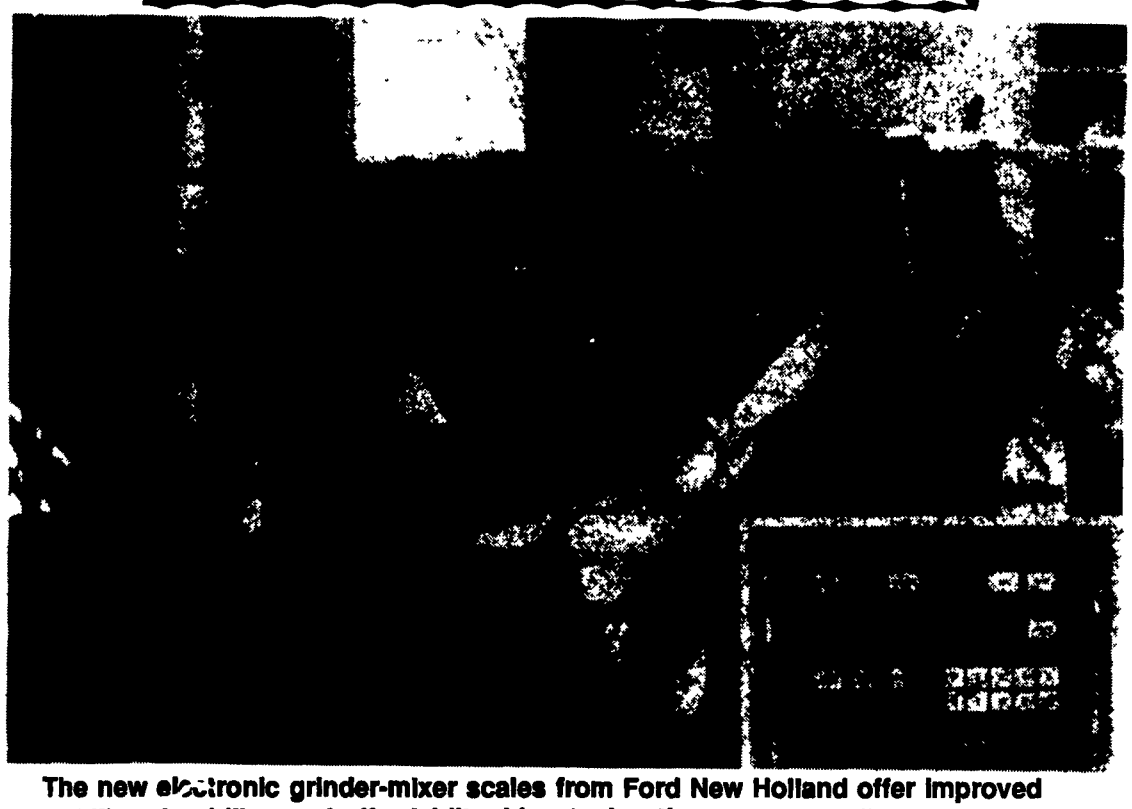
Business News



The new electronic grinder-mixer scales from Ford New Holland offer improved reliability, durability, and affordability. Livestock rations are controlled accurately. Two models are available as options for the four-model grinder-mixer series.

Ford New Holland Adds Electronic Grinder-Mixer Scales

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Ford New Holland grinder-mixers are now available with two new electronic scales. The new scales are high-quality units that are more dependable and durable, according to Howard Winey of Ford New Holland. They are also more affordable, he adds. "Touch panel" switches on both scales are covered by a sealed membrane to avoid dust or moisture penetration.

The Model 5 scale offers weigth-controlled ration making for livestockmen who felt they couldn't afford a scale, says Winey. It has a digital back-lit readout screen with separate buttons for tare and net/gross weight plus on/off switches. A touch of the "tare" switch starts the weight reading at zero for each ingredient added to the batch. A touch of the other switch indicates the total weight of feed in the mixer. Rations control is easy and accurate.

The Model 10 scale measures with the same accuracy but offers additional advantages. Ingredient items can be entered on a numerical keyboard to program a weight alarm and light to alert the operator when the correct amount of each ingredient has been added.

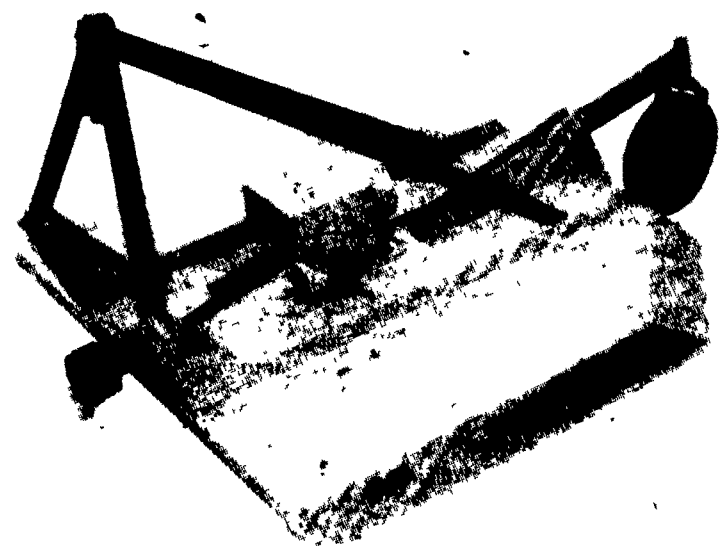
Both scales are mounted in rust-proof cases and are sealed against rain, moisture and dust. They are interchangeable and use the same weighbar system. Both electronic scales offer self-diagnostic testing and low-battery warnings. Operation is reliable, even in freezing weather.

Land Pride Offers Rotary Cutters

ASSARIA, Ks. — Land Pride now offers their new 15 series Rotary Cutters for standard duty work. With working widths of 4, 5 and 6 foot, these cutters are suited to any 60 hp tractor with a Category I hitch. Their one-piece reinforced formed deck provides a rugged cutting platform. A heavy-duty flex hitch is standard equipment; its all steel bracing eliminates the use of chains. The Land Pride Rotary Cutter features a heavy wall arm and a 15 inch laminated tire for its tail wheel. There are two free swinging, heat-treated alloy steel blades mounted to the sturdy 3/16 inch round pan stump guard. Their high lift design provides the productivity to make short work of the grass and brush that you will encounter. The overall weight of these series 15 Land Pride Rotary Cutters range from 420 to 641 pounds depending on the cutting width. These Rotary Cutters undergo a full range of safety tests to prove their worthiness of the Land Pride name.

The 15 series Land Pride Rotary Cutters are produced in America and backed by one of America's premier agricultural manufacturers, Great Plans Manufacturing.

For more information contact Land Pride, PO Box 218, Assaria, KS 67416; 913/667-4755.



Suited to any 60 horsepower tractor, this rotary cutter has two free swinging, heat-treated alloy steel blades mounted to the sturdy round pan stump guard.

Pennsylvania Farm Organizations Request Farm, Food Policy

HARRISBURG — Recently the three general Pennsylvania farm organizations, the Pennsylvania State Grange, the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, and the Pennsylvania Farmers Association (PFA) had a meeting of minds and concluded that an ongoing National Farm and Food Policy would unite agricultural interests and benefit the Pennsylvania farmers.

The goal of this National Farm and Food Policy is to have an adequate supply of food with an adequate return to farmers.

According to William H. Ringler, Master of the Pennsylvania State Grange, "The Pennsylvania State Grange, represneting 42,000 farm and rural Pennsylvanians, wholeheartedly supports a National Farm and Food Policy." Ringler continued, "This ongoing policy would be for the benefit of all citizens, because they would have affordable food to nourish their families. In return it benefits farmers by allowing a fair price for their products."

William Sturges, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, stated, "A National Farm and Food Policy with long range goals is the only way we can preserve our environment, protect farm income, and guarantee an abundant supply of reasonably priced food for our nation and for export. It is time to get politics out of agriuclture; we must set our priorities in the best interest of all citizens."

Speaking on behalf of its 23,600 Pennsylvania farm families, Keith Eckel, President of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association, notes that "Improving net farm income and enhancing the economic opportunity for farmers are PFA's most important goals.

For Pennsylvania farmers to survive financially, they need an ongoing National Farm and Food Policy to secure a sufficient living. These Pennsylvania farm organizations believe that an ongoing policy will provide that security.

Junior Conservation School Planned In Dauphin County

DAUPHIN — Each year the Dauphin County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs sponsors a seven-day Junior Conservation School for children between the ages of 13 and 16. The school is co-educational and offers a unique experience for youngsters to obtain "Hands-on-Experience" in areas of natural resource conservation. The dates for this year's school are June 11-17 and the school is held at Camp Hebron, Halifax.

According to W. Lee Warfel, Camp Director, the school will begin with registration on Sunday, June 11. During the following period from Monday through Friday work experience will include: stream improvement, fish management, wildlife management, soil and water conservation, agricultural farm management, exposure to water quality concerns, and forestry management. Many other unique experiences will also be included.

The week-long school will also include a parents evening, an awards ceremony for outstanding students, and special programs by The Pennsylvania Fish Commission, The Pennsylvania Game Commission, The Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry, The U.S. Soil Conservation Service, and The Dauphin County Conservation District.

It's not too late to register, but the time is running short, according to Joel C. Myers, President of the Dauphin County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs. Student applications are accepted on a first-come first-served basis and may be obtained from the camp director, W. Lee Warfel, at (717) 896-8024, assistant directors, Clarence Hoffman or Joel C. Myers. Usually students are sponsored by local sportsmen's groups and others. The total cost for the 1989 school is $90. Quite a bargain for a week-long school offering such a wide and varied learning experience. Don't wait, contact one of the individuals above or your local sportsmen's clubs now. Joel C. Myers included by saying, school is not only open to Dauphin County residents, but students from adjoining counties as well.

Junior Conservation School features hands-on-experience for each student. Stream improvement, wildlife management, soil and water conservation, forestry, and agricultural exposure are highlights of this year's school.

Du Pont Plans To Expand Forage Weed, Pest Control Products

WILMINGTON, DE — As more growers specialize in hay and forage production, they need better technology in weed and pest control, according to Dennis Crass, Du Pont product manager for pasture and rangeland herbicides and insecticides.

"Like other segments in agriculture, the forage grower is becoming more specialized to fit market niches. We see more growers emphasizing high quality forage production to meet the needs of horse, dairy and beef customers who demand a specific type of product," says Crass. "These growers need better tools to maximize this market, so Du Pont is placing greater emphasis on a product line for the forage industry."

Du Pont products for pasture and rangeland include "Karmex," "Lexone," "Sinbar" and "Velpar" herbicides and "Lannate" insecticide.

New forage products on the horizon include "Ally" herbicide and "Asana" insecticide.

"Ally" herbicide is approved for extended Experimental Use Permit (EUP) field tests in 37 states during the 1989 growing season. Field tests this summer will focus on gathering data for "Ally" control of multiflora rose and thistle in fescue and other commonly grown pasture grasses throughout the Midwest and the South.

During 1988, growers in 17 states tested "Ally" under EUP trials investigating the herbicide's control of bahiagrass in bermudagrass pastures. The trials showed that "Ally" wipes out bahiagrass and a large number of broadleaf weeds.

"Asana" insecticide is in the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) registration process for a forage use label. "Asana" is labeled for use in cotton and some vegetable and fruit crops to control most major and secondary pests.

As part of the company's commitment to the forage industry, Du Pont recently announced that it will support the American Forage and Grassland Council (AFGC) in efforts to improve forage profitability through the President's Award for affiliate council membership growth. The AFGC provides a national voice for the forage industry, with 30 affiliate state councils and more than 6,000 members representing growers and agribusiness leaders.

Chicken Festival Salutes Cecile Steele

OCEAN VIEW, DE — The 1989 Delmarva Chicken Festival, set for June 16 and 17, will pay special tribute to the founder of the nation's broiler chicken industry, Cecile Long Steele. History credits Mrs. Steele of Ocean View as the first person to raise an entire flock of chickens for meat purposes.

The wife of David Wilmer Steele, a Coast Guard captain, Mrs. Steele is described as a hard-working woman of strong religious faith. For several years she had kept a backyard flock of about 50 chicks to supply eggs for the family and for an occasional chicken dinner. In 1923, when her order of 50 replacement chicks arrived, she found instead 500. Having no room to keep them for a long period, she grew the birds for about 18 weeks to an average weight of 2¼ pounds and sold the 387 survivors for the premium price of 62 cents per pound, live weight.

The following year, Mrs. Steele, well-pleased with her initial success, started a flock of 1,000 chicks. Her husband, recognizing an opportunity for a profitable venture, left his job with the Coast Guard and began building chicken houses. Within five years, the Steeles were raising 25,000 young broiler chickens for meat.

The idea quickly caught on among neighbors around Ocean View and soon spread across the Delmarva Peninsula. Hatcheries sprang up to supply the flood of orders for baby chicks and feed mills moved into the area to provide ready-mixed feed for feed dealers whose businesses mushroomed as a result of the fast-moving broiler industry. Finally, processing plants were established to slaughter and dress the birds for city markets.

As the broiler industry grew, the Steeles enjoyed success as growers and through their involvement with one of the newly formed hatcheries. Steele became involved in local politics and was elected to the Delaware Senate in 1937.

On October 7, 1940, the lives of Cecile and Wilmer Steele ended tragically in an accident aboard the family yacht. Out for a day of fishing with friends, a sudden explosion followed by fire destroyed the vessel from which the Steeles were unable to escape. Cecile and Wilmer Steele were survived by four high school and college age children. One son, David, still resides in Ocean View.

The 41st Chicken Festival will salute Cecile Steele as the founder of an industry which today is a multi-billion dollar enterprise providing consumers around the world with an abundant, economical source of animal protein.

For further information on the Delmarva Chicken Festival, contact the Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., R.D. 2, Box 47, Georgetown, DE 19947-9622, (302) 856-9037 or the Town of Ocean View, P.O. Box 3, Ocean View, DE 19970, (302) 539-9797.

The late Cecile Steele, left, of Ocean View, Del., is credited as the first person to raise a flock of chickens to a young tender age and sell the flock in its entirety for meat purposes. From Steele's simple beginnings, the poultry industry has grown to become the area's number one agricultural enterprise with annual production of more than one-half billion birds.

Agway To Expand Swine Grow/Finish Research

SYRACUSE, NY — Cooperative Research Farms (CRF), of which Agway is a member, is making a major expansion in its research of swine grower/finisher technology with construction of a half-million dollar research production facility at the Lexington, Ill., research center. Agway's swine research is conducted by CRF.

Three new grow/finish buildings, with a total price tag of approximately $500,000 will replace two aging structures. Those two buildings which will be demolished, have been in use since the research facility began operations in 1959. The age of those buildings, along with their limited size, were seen as hindering any expanded research into grow/finish technology.

"CRF has been a leader in the research and development of early weaning feeds and feeding strategies, and the facility at Lexington has played a major role in that success," said John Niver, chairman of CRF Swine Planning Board.

"This new facility should allow CRF to maintain a leadership role in the development of new grow/finish feeds, feed production management, and environmental systems," he said.

A total of 102.3 million hogs are marketed annually in the United States and Canada, with approximately 75 to 80 percent of total swine feed usage in the area of 40 pounds to market weight. The potential for improved efficiency in the grow/finish area due to biotechnology and repartitioning agents makes this an area worthy of increased study, according to Niver.

"With CRF member cooperatives commanding about 20 percent of total swine sales in North America, the need exists to maintain facilities that are capable of statistically identifying the real differences and production improvements derived from new technology," said Niver.

Plans for the new facilities were finalized after the swine planning board completed a study of research stations at Eli Lilly, the University of Illinois, Purdue, the University of Guelph (Canada), the University of Wisconsin, and Monsanto.

Demolition of the two existing buildings was completed in May and construction of the first new building began June 1. Completion of all three buildings is scheduled for mid-September.

The three buildings will be connected by a central feed alleyway with 30 individual one ton feed storage tanks to accommodate the experimental research rations that are needed. They will have a one-time capacity of 1,056 pigs on trial as compared to 816 pigs in the old facility. Portable scales will be used within the alleyway to weigh the animals.

Two of the new buildings will be 32x118-foot, each with 48 grow/finish pens (eight pigs to a pen) and two gilt developer pens. One will be fan-ventilated while the other will be naturally ventilated.

The third building will be ventilated via an Axis Air system which saves heat and recycles part of the exhausted air allowing for more uniform temperature. That 32x90-foot structure will have 36 grow/finish pens and two gilt developer pens.

Each building's floor will be totally slatted with concrete slates over a six foot deep pit for manure storage. The manure will be chisel applied to crop land on the farm as conditions permit.

Two of the buildings will have 12x16-foot observation rooms with 5-foot windows for visitors to view the grow/finish operations. Visitors will be separated from the animals which will help improve the maintenance of herd health.

"The Andrews family, Rich, Marti and Christen (6), Jessica (3) and Patricia (1¼), as well as two horses, three dogs, two pregnant cats, and one parakeet live pretty far from Lancaster. It's true and with only a little more than three acres, we're also pretty far removed from "real" farming! None-the-less, we all enjoy our little piece of country we share here in English Creek, N.J., and in time, we hope to at least be able to grow our own vegetables with enough to get us through the winter.

"English Creek is located in Atlantic County, New Jersey, about 30 miles from the glitz and glamor of the casinos in Atlantic City. Being life-long residents of the area, the casinos don't do much for us. We'd much rather spend our weekends at home with the kids and assorted animals. We built our home ourselves, and now we're beginning to concentrate on the land, improving it and getting it ready for next spring, so that we can finally plant!"

I also help in any area of farming that needs me like picking up rocks, unloading hay wagons, cleaning the barn, and running for parts. In my spare time I am an emergency medical technician and secretary of the Strykersville Volunteer Fire Squad."

"We lived on the farm ever since we were married. We started in Lebanon County then came to Lancaster County. I'm from New Holland and my husband is from Clay. We have never known anything else but farming; the landlord sold the farm and we had to move. Then we moved off the farm, and my husband worked in a foundry, then for a builder for nearly 20 years. I worked in a bake shop at a local store for almost 14 years. When the store moved out, I started at home. We raise vegetables for us and sell quite a lot. My husband still works for his former boss putting hay away and he does carpenter work."

Deutz Allis Promises 24-Hour Return On Rotary Combine Parts Orders

NORCROSS, GA — Combine owners rely on their dealers for fast parts service during harvest season, notes Jim Seaver, vice president of marketing at Deutz-Allis Corporation.

"Dealers stock most high-turnover parts in anticipation of satisfying customers needs during this critical season," Seaver says. "Quick access to breakdown parts not in stock can also help keep that combine rolling with minimum delay."

As a part of the company's Total Customer Satisfaction program, Seaver announced that Deutz-Allis guarantees shipment of combine breakdown parts orders within 24 hours of receiving the order. This 24-hour Save-the-Day parts guarantee is good for any new or used R40, R50, R60 and R70 rotary Gleaner combine.

"If we don't ship that part within 24 hours, the farmer will get the part, plus shipping and handling, for free," Seaver says. "We're committed to satisfying our customers, and we're putting our money where our mouth is — in terms of warranty, parts availability, manufacturing improvements and reliable product performance."

The 1989 Save-the-Day guarantee will supplement the company's recently introduced five-year, 5,000-hour combine warranty.

As well, simply by purchasing a rotary Gleaner combine, farmers will have eliminated the source of 40 percent of engine downtime, he says. "Liquid-cooling systems are the major source of engine breakdowns. The Deutz air-cooled diesel engine design eliminates radiators, water pumps, thermostats, hoses and other liquid-cooling related hardware."

Only the rotary Gleaner combine is equipped with the Deutz air-cooled design, he says. This engine is cooled by a powerful blower that circulates air around each individual cylinder and head, he notes, and as an added refinement, blower fan speed is varied to match cooling needs. This results in as much as 6 to 8 percent additional fuel savings.

The reliability of that engine, as well as the combine cylinder drive, transmission, hydro unit, rear steering axle, and front axle including final drives, are all backed by the five-year, 5,000-hour warranty against defects, Seaver notes. The company introduced this warranty in December.

Additionally, the company is just wrapping up more than $7 million in capital improvements at its Independence, Mo., combine plant, Seaver says.

"When producers take a look at a Gleaner combine, they'll find that many features recently added by competitors as new developments have actually been standard on the Gleaner combine for years," he added. "Plus, we're standing behind our combine with the best warranty in the business and the only 24-hour breakdown parts guarantee available."

Seaver notes that producers who wish to find out more about the combine, plus its warranty and parts support, should contact their area Deutz-Allis dealer.

Hatfield Expands Daily Capacity To 10,000 Head

HATFIELD (Montgomery Co.)—Pick any weekday and you will find trucks of all sizes standing in line to unload hogs into the new holding pens here at Hatfield Packing Company. Not only tractor trailers but also farmer's small grain or pick-up trucks.

And these pens are constructed diagonally within a 412ft. x 156ft. u-shaped metal building so the incoming hogs do not need to make a 90 degree turn as they move from the truck to the kill floor. This $1 million holding facility built by Agri-Inc., Ephrata, and equipment by Tri-County Confinement Systems, Inc., Lebanon, is part of a $30 million renovation Hatfield has completed to increase their production capacity from 3800 hogs per day to 10,000 hogs per day.

"With the new facility, we don't need to force the hogs as much," said Jerry Clemens, vice president, hog procurement. They move a lot freeer in an enviornment like this."

Tom Moyer, manager, agrees. "With the pens constructed on an angle with a solid side wall, the pigs can't see into the other pens, so they chase easier."

The system is designed so the hogs come in from the trucks, move around the circumference of the building and into the pens toward the center. They have no cross traffic.

Quick coupling hoses are available to wash the pens with slated concrete floors constructed over a pit with a built-in flush system.

With the enlarged packing facility Clemens says producers have the opportunity to expand. "They have a good market and we're seeing some increase in price. The last 10 months have not been very good for hog producers. But now that the price is above break-even, we have seen some producers get bigger."

Hatfield buys 55 to 60 percent of their hogs from Pennsylvania. Others come from New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and North Carolina.

Hatfield buys many of the youth swine projects at county fairs and roundups. Clemens doesn't know how many they have purchased over the years. But he knows they have bought "a lot."

"I have people who want to know if I have stock in Lancaster Farming because of the number of times I get my picture in the paper with the kids who have the champions," Clemens said. "But we don't only buy the champions. People have seen that we are not just there for the publicity. We're there to support the whole sale," Clemens said.

"I don't really want to buy two-thirds to three-forths of the hogs in the youth sales, but you need to support the kids. Basically, these kids are our producers of the future, and we need to keep them interested in the livestock end of it. Some don't stay on the farm, but it's still good experience.

"We spend a lot of money, but I think it goes for a good cause," Clemens said. "I'm a little dismayed that some of the feed companies and other agri-businesses don't put more money into the youth projects."

Hatfield pays the farmers according to the quality of the carcass. A fat-o-meter is used to probe through the loin eye to give a back fat measurement and a lean cut percentage. The better the animal, the better the farmer gets paid.

"We now see a leaner hog," Clemens said. "But we can still make improvements. Up to now, the producer didn't have the incentive to produce a top hog. But now with our system, he has the incentive to grow a better hog and look for better genetics.

John W. Clemens, president and chief executive officer, said the expansion, the largest in Hatfield's 94-year history, represents a major commitment to their producers, to their customers and to their more than 900 employees. Hatfield's full product line includes ham, frankfurters, sausage, bacon and a variety of other pork products. They are distributed throughout the northeast.

Alfalfa Crop Keeps Farmer In Business

OLEY (Berks Co.) — A solution to Ken Zook's dilemma — how to lower protein costs, yet maintain his herd's nutritional level — was solved by one word: alfalfa.

"That's what kept me in business," he said. It's also brought him recognition for two consecutive years as the reserve champion in the Pennsylvania Alfalfa Producers Program.

In 1988, Zook produced 8.9 tons per acre. That yeild gave him second place in region one and reserve champion. The top winner was the Milton Hershey Farm in Dauphin County with 9.4 tons per acre. Last year Zook produced 9 tons per acre.

He says Mother Nature, good timing and variety selection are responsible for such consistent yields. That's why he watches the weather and responds accordingly, keeps a sharp eye on his crop during the growing season and evaluates varieties on a long-term basis. This year's winning tonnage was the second year for Pioneer® brand 5432 and was the same field he earned reserve honors for last year.

Consistency and dependability are also qualities that Zook applies to his management practices.

He tests his soil every other year.

"I always maintain a high fertility level. This helps ensure the nutrients will be there for the crop when they're needed," he said. Zook strives for a 7.0 pH level and applies lime in the fall if it's needed in preparation for alfalfa seeding.

The state forage producers program requires a soil test on fields entered, so Zook has tested his alfalfa field annually.

And regarding spring fieldwork.

"I stay off the fields in spring as much as possible, except to work the ground for seeding. It seems there is about a week in March when you can really work the fields, it might be early or late, but it's there every year."

And then comes harvest.

"My first cutting is taken off by May 20, then it's a cutting between the 20th and 30th of each month until August," Zook says.

He makes his fifth and final cutting in mid-October. Zook acknowledges that he's taking a risk cutting in mid-October, "but it's worth it for the extra tonnage."

Zook estimates his fifth cutting adds three-quarters to one ton an acre to his overall yield. "And that fifth crop is always a pretty good one."

The primary reason for Zook's interest in alfalfa is his dairy herd. Since switching to alfalfa haylage as a source of protein he estimates his protein supplement costs have been reduced by a third.

Zook also claims that a haylage-based ration is more suitable for his dairy cows.

"As ruminants they are better suited to this kind of ration. And they have less health problems with this kind of feeding system," he said.

"I've noticed a big change in their (cows') appetite. It's been a lot more stable with an alfalfa-based ration. Even with the hot weather we had last summer they ate more and were more healthy. And when that happens they're producing more milk," he said.

And that, Zook says is what we're all trying to do to stay in business — keep producing quality milk while maintaining costs — and Zook's doing that, thanks to alfalfa.

The Pennsylvania Alfalfa Growers Program is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and Pennsylvania State University. More details on the results and this year's program are available from Sid Bosworth at Penn State or county extension agents.

SLICK CONCRETE CAN BE ROUGHENED

SCABBLING is an effective way to avoid unnecessary losses of cattle. The SCABBLER makes bands about two inches wide approximately 1/8" to 3/16 in. depth. This gives sufficient area for good footing while allowing you to scrape the smooth surface as before. It is near enough to the surface to give your cows full advantage of the roughness and deep enough to remain effective for years. It greatly aids in heat detection.

And the good news is that it is reasonably priced. You have the choice of doing it yourself or having us do it for you. We offer service right to your door. Call us for more details.

FARM MANAGEMENT

By Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm Management Agent
Penn State Cooperative Extension

Should I Sign That Contract

In a recent article we looked at the question "Should I make that investment?" Today's question may be very closely related to that decision, since in many cases, a major investment involves a contract, and many contracts involve a major investment.

There are many types of contractual arrangements. These are agreements between two parties binding each to do certain things such as: rental of real estate, lease of automobiles, equipment, livestock or machinery; business agreements to share income and expenses in partnerships, crop-share arrangements or other forms of joint ventures; or contracts to raise livestock, or to buy or sell a specified commodity at a set price.

Since such contracts are vigorously promoted, it is easy for anyone to see some advantage in becoming party to an agreement which satisfies a felt want. According to TV advertisements virtually anybody can lease a luxury automobile, and getting involved in a large business venture is almost as easy. To avoid much grief and financial hardship it is important to follow some very simple rules BEFORE signing any agreement.

1. Get it in writing.

The gentleman's word and his handshake might have been good enough for grandpa, but it will be hard to convince a judge that such promises were made when they are not honored. If the other party does not have it in writing, then you need to have your legal advisor draft the terms to which you wish to agree, and have the other party sign. This is particularly important within a family. A son can work the best years of his life in a family business, only to find that he has to share everything with other siblings who long since flew the nest and made their fortunes elsewhere.

2. Read the fine print.

Take the time required to review the details in fine print. It may be necessary to get other opinions, particularly from your attorney, on what the terms and conditions mean. Don'tbe rushed into signing anything that you don't understand. If someone is pressuring you to sign without allowing you this time, walk away from the agreement.

3. Count the Cost.

The contracted costs are often not the total cost. If you lease an automobile or a structure you will have to pay the lease, PLUS the operating costs and the maintenance, repair, insurance, taxes etc. which apply to the leased asset. Manure disposal can be a major cost and an added risk factor for livestock operations. Calculate carefully and conservatively if, during the lease period with average, good, and bad years, the net result of the agreement is greater profits. If the result is little or no profit, then the proposal only increases your operation's exposure to risk. There are many operations in financial difficulty today because they leased some "money saving" structures.

4. Don't lease to fool the banker.

Credit institutions attempt to restrict investments when business profit margins are too slim to allow increased debt. Leasing to avoid credit obligations creates lease payments which are often greater than the payments to purchase with bank credit. It might be possible to laugh at the bank for a short while, but it's difficult to laugh at the Sheriff when he puts up the sale notice.

5. Examine the other party's motives.

If there's so much profit to be made in this venture why are they not making the investment to reap all these profits? Check the returns and the costs over the life of your obligation. This means if you have to build a building to undertake a contract, your obligation (to the bank that finances the building) lasts as long as the payments on the building. The contract needs to be profitable enough to cover the building payments PLUS all your expenses and mainteneance, PLUS a good return for labor, PLUS a worthwhile return for management and risk. If the contract is for a lesser period than the building payments, then you carry the risk alone.

Contracting normally spreads the risk between both parties in the agreement. This means that while some risk of low prices can be avoided, all the potential gain from high prices is lost. All other factors being equal, the good manager will ususlly make more profit over the long haul by not contracting.

6. Is there an escape clause?

Some agreements allow parties to give notice and discontinue a business arrangement as circumstances change. This may not be possible in other agreements and adds to the risk of getting involved in them.

White Presents Front End Loaders

COLDWATER, OH — The White 1170 and 1185 front end loaders are sized to perform the tough everyday loader jobs for utility and row crop tractors. These White loaders have a tough, box beam steel construction that will load, haul, grade and dig. The 1170 and 1185 are designed for both two and four wheel drive utility and row crop tractors.

These front end loaders feature quick attach mounting and removal of the loader which enables you to utilize a tractor for a variety of other jobs. To remove the loader, you simply unfasten the two bolts and back away at the same time using the tractor hydraulics to put the loader in storage position. Each loader has a wrap around bumper that protects the tractor from damage. The bumper also doubles as the storage stand of the loader.

The U-shaped stand in each model makes them sturdy and convenient in storage. In storage, the bumper and the bucket provide two wide bases for stability, even on slopes and loose footings. No matter where you park these loaders, they will stay in place for easy remounting.

The 1170 and 1185 has a smooth positive response. Standard on the 1185 and optional on the 1170, the loader bucket automatically stays level as it is raised, eliminating the need to work both the raise and tilt controls simultaneously. The hydraulically controlled self leveling of the bucket gives you less worry about the load falling back on the tractor.

The 1170 model can come with either a 72- or 84-inch bucket that can speed up your work in light or heavy materials. Other optional equipment includes a 60-inch manure fork with tines that assist in scraping manure in barns.

The 1185 model can come with either an 84- or 96-inch heavy duty material bucket for handling heavy materials. An optional 108-inch light material bucket has the largest capacity of them all for easy chores such as removing snow. The 1185 model can also come with a 72-inch manure fork with nine tines and a dirt plate. Plus a grapple fork that can carry large bales and silage.

The White-New Idea Equipment Division of Allied Products Corporation is a major manufacturer and distributor with more than 1,500 dealers in North America. The White Farm Equipment line includes tractors, planters, and tillage equipment.

Spider Syndrome Recording Program Initiated

The National Suffolk Sheep Association membership voted to begin a voluntary program of recording the sire and dam of purebred Suffolk sheep diagnosed with "Spider Syndrome," a genetic defect that triggers skeletal deformities in afflicted lambs. "NSSA's recording program will enable Suffolk breeders to voluntarily pool information gained through their own sheep breeding program with others to better determine which indviduals are confirmed as known carriers of the spider syndrome," said Alan Culham, NSSA Health Committee chairman. For more information, contact NSSA at 314/442-4103.

MANAGEMENT

7. Where will you be at

If participation in an agreement makes it possible to increase net worth and so be substantially better off at the end of the period, then it might be worth considering. Make sure that buyout provisions at the end of leases are defined and reasonable. The problem is that by the end of an agreement period a capital asset may be obsolete or worn out or both, so the real estate may be worth less than it would be without structures like that.

8. Need help in analyzing an agreement?

If you are considering changes in a farm business which involve new investments, leases, or contracts, Penn State Extension has farm management agents who can help all, regardless or race, creed or national origin, with business analysis and long-range budgets.

Rainwater Cisterns Provide Alternative Water Source

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Finding a safe and reliable water supply may be a problem this summer. Though Pennsylvania's streams and reservoirs might be filled to capacity by heavy spring rains, these supplies won't last forever. Water table levels, already quite low, will fill only gradually. If your water supply is limited or has become contaminated, then collected rainwater stored in cisterns may be your solution.

Rainwater catchment systems are ancient inventions that still are used today. Because groundwater is in short supply in Hawaii and the Caribbean, island residents rely on cisterns as a major source of water. In western Pennsylvania, coal mining has rendered surface and groundwater supplies unfit, causing rural residents to turn to rainwater as well. Cisterns also can serve as reservoirs for extinguishing fires or as additional sources of water for home or farm use under drought conditions.

According to Dr. William Sharpe, Penn State associate professor of forest hydrology, a successful cistern system should include roof-catchments, a roof-wash diverter, a roof-wash filter and the cistern. These parts can be purchased, but many can be made with the right materials and tools.

A key to building a catchment and cistern system is determining the cistern's size according to the amount of rainfall and rate of use. Most places in Pennsylvania receive 40 inches of rain a year, enough to supply a home or small farm with an adequate amount of water. A three-month supply of water is generally sufficient since the region's rainfall is evenly distributed over the course of the year.

Most households use 50 to 75 gallons a day per person. However, when cistern levels are low, water-conscious families often cut back their water usage by as much as one-half. Water use for livestock and farms varies considerably, so growers and farmers will need to determine their own water needs.

To catch water, a roof and rainspouts may require little or no modification. "The most suitable roofing materials include asphalt shingles, slate and tin or aluminum sheeting," explains Sharpe. "Rough surfaces will collect extra dirt and debris, and some painted surfaces and wood and asphalt shingles may give water an objectionable taste or color." Normal gutters can be used, though they must be covered to keep out leaves and debris. Overhanging branches and trees should be removed as well.

The dirt and dust that collect on the roof between rainstorms can include particles of lead and other pollutants as well as bird droppings. A small amount of rainwater will wash this debris off, but the dirty water must be diverted from the cistern reservoir. Automatic diverters can be purchased, but a manual valve will serve the same purpose.

A filter between the catchment and cistern is necessary to remove dirt and contaminants. These filters can be bought or constructed out of layers of gravel and sand. Sharpe says that one advantage of using limestone gravel in the filter is that it cuts down rainwater's acidity.

Since the cistern itself is nothing more than an underground storage tank, certain precautions will keep a water supply safe and potable. "Whether you use a cistern for home or livestock use, locate it close to where the water will be used," says Sharpe. "In the Northeast, the cistern will need to be below ground to keep from freezing. You can incorporate it into building structures below the house or barn, using foundation walls for structural support."

A cistern can be placed near a second building, such as a barn or equipment shed, to let gravity provide the flow to the place of use. This setup is preferable to the need for a pump and pressurized system. The ground around a cistern should be graded to provide good drainage. It should be located upslope from any sewage disposal facilities and should not be located in areas that flood.

"You can make a cistern out of concrete, concrete blocks, mortared brick or stone," says Sharpe. "Or you can find tanks made of pre-cast concrete, steel, redwood or fiberglass. Cast-in-place reinforced concrete works best for underground cisterns, but you can use cinder block cisterns as long as the cinder blocks are filled with cement and reinforced with steel rods."

The most important design feature is cistern size. Home systems should have a 5,000 gallon capacity, though 10,000 gallons is preferable. Cisterns for livestock use will be considerably larger and should be sized to meet specific needs.

Sharpe warns that since rainwater is acidic and therefore corrosive, pipes carrying the water should be plastic to minimize metal corrosion. Water also can be treated to remove its acidity using any number of commercially prepared chemicals.

Sharpe has updated "Rainwater Cisterns," a circular on building a roof-catchment and cistern system. The circular gives complete information on designing and building a cistern and includes cistern dimensions and water treatment methods. To request special circular 277, contact Penn State Cooperative Extension, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802. Or call Sandra Gill at (814) 865-1018.

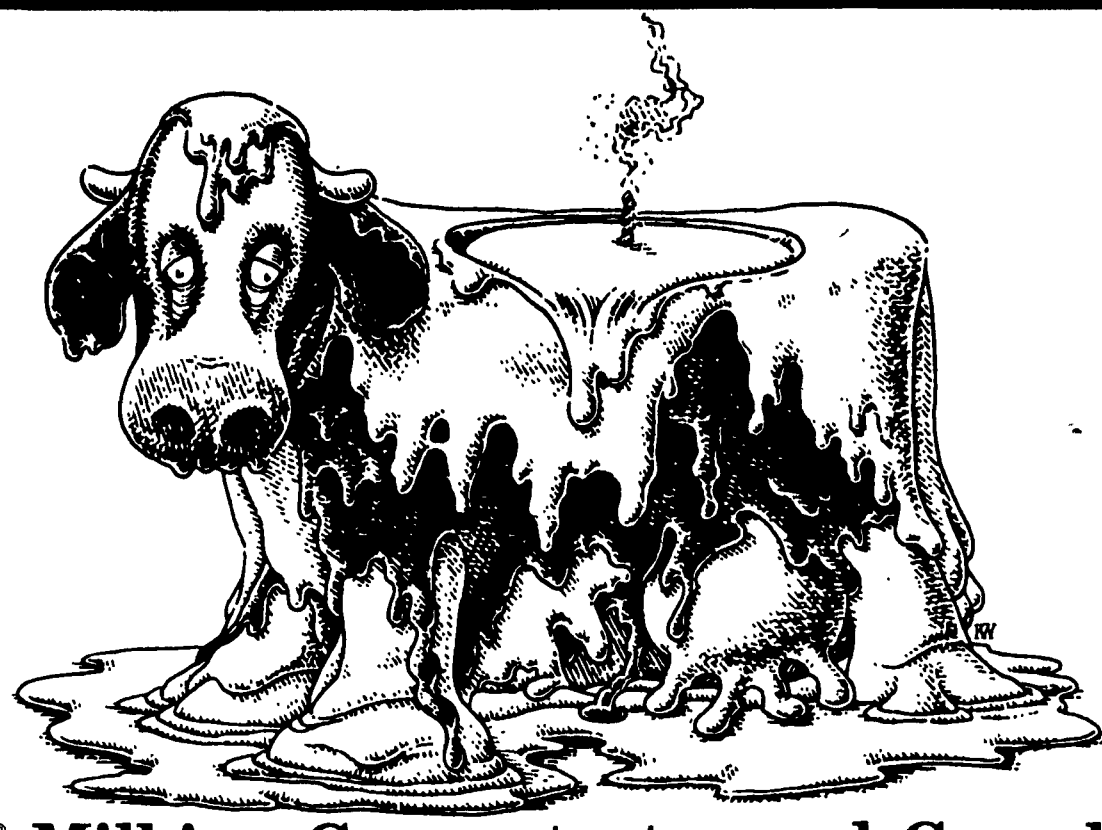
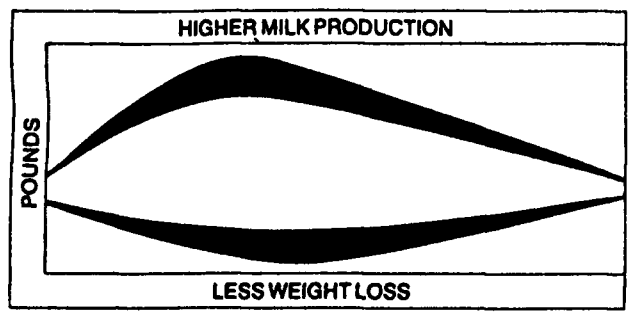
Announcing the end of burned-out high-performance cows.



Maxi-Tech® brand Milking Concentrates and Completes helps her to milk to the max without draining her reserves.

Your cows react to hard work in much the same way you do. When they work extra hard to give maximum production, they can become drained. Exhausted. Burned out. And that can lead to reduced butterfat test and weight loss, costly missed heats, health problems and loss in future production capability.



But that's all changed. Now there's milking supplements that help your cows produce to their fullest genetic capacity while maintaining their body condition. It's Purina's Maxi-Tech Lineup, the highest-energy milking supplements you can buy.

The secret is its unsurpassed nutrition — featuring high-energy content, optimum nitrogen sources, fermentable fiber, minerals, vitamins and specially blended macro-nutrients. So unlike other concentrates, Maxi-Tech's keep your cows in great shape to encourage capacity production, good health and fast breedback—without depressing butterfat levels. Lactation after lactation.

So whether you grind and mix or feed a total mixed ration, your cows can now milk to the max without burning themselves out. See your Purina dealer today for a Maxi-Tech supplement that is right for your operation.
